Today

We Excel in Smallpox.

Mr. Mellon Housekeeping.

Jeopard, Double—Triple.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

THE United States has more smallpox than any country out of Asia. There were 33,752 smallpox cases in this country in 1926. The reason is simple. We have more smallpox because we have more opposing vaccination, which prevents smallpox.

In Europe, where vaccination is intelligently enforced, 10 nations had not one single case of smallpox in 1926. Eighteen nations had only 1,000 cases among them.

IT IS enlightening to read that smallpox is more frequent where opposition to vaccination is strongest, southern California and northern England.

We had in 1926 six times as many cases of smallpox as Russia, with more population than we have, and in Russia, before Catherine the Second was vaccinated, scores of thousands died of smallpox every year. The little boy that supplied vaccine for the Russian empress, by the way, was actually created Duke of Smallpox.

SECRETARY MELLON, still busy with financial housecleaning, has called in the second issue of Liberty bonds, paying 4 1-4 per cent, and will pay on Nov. 15. He does not feel that Uncle Sam should continue to pay such outrageously high interest. Calling these bonds will save taxpayers many millions every year. The taxpayers who hire Mr. Mellon to look after their finances for a salary less than that of a second-rate expert accountant, have a bargain.

MAZER TELLS OF PLOT AGAINST EDITOR

Promised Immunity, he Takes Stand for Prosecution in Trial of Streitenberger, Charged With Mellett Murder.

S. A. LENGEL CASE AFTERMATH, CLAIM

Testifies Deposed Police Department Member Said "Someone Ought to Run Mellett Out of Town."

CANTON, O., May 11.—Hopes of the state were apparently realized today, following testimony of Louis Mazer, formerly of East Liverpool, in the trial of Floyd Streitenberger, former city detective, charged with complicity in the murder of Don Mellett, Canton publisher, here last summer.

Tells of Hatching of Plot.

Mazer, indicted for first degree murder, in connection with the crime, but promised immunity for turning state's evidence, was the first witness to take the stand this morning. He testified that the plot which resulted in the murder of the newspaperman was originally hatched immediately following the hearing for S. A. Lengel, ousted Canton chief of police, a year ago last March.

At that time, according to Mazer's testimony, Streitenberger told Mazer, who was present at the hearing, that "some one ought to run Mellett out of town, because he is causing Lengel too much trouble."

Admits He Hired McDermott.

Mazer said he and Streitenberger were "good friends," and often met at Streitenberger's home, on the street and in Lengel's office. He admitted that he had hired Patrick McDermott, convicted gunman, now serving a life term for the murder, "to slug Mellett," indicating there was no plot to kill, and had agreed to pay McDermott $200 for the "job," but claims he did so at Streitenberger's suggestion.

Testifying, concerning a letter which former Prosecutor C. B. McClintock had written to the chief of police on July 17, one month before the murder, which requested an investigation of a "certain house, owned by Louis Mazer, and operated by Doll Carey, known as Mazer's sweetheart," Mazer said that Streitenberger had turned the letter over to him, and that they had had "quite a laugh" over it.

Other Witnesses Testify.

Included among witnesses yesterday were Coroner T. C. McQuate, whose testimony was of the same technical character as submitted in the McDermott and Ben Rudner trials. Mrs. Florence Mellett, widow of the slain newspaperman; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Vail, friends and neighbors of the Mellett family, and Dr. Guy Maxwell, Mellett family physician, testified concerning events immediately preceding and following the murder.

Prosecutor Harter declares the state will present evidence to show that Streitenberger conspired with others, to bring certain men to Canton to do away with Mellett and that the former city detective helped McDermott to escape, following the shooting.

NEW DOWNTOWN FIRE STATION URGED AFTER CITY SURVEY

Undermanned Department Jeopardizes Property, Engineers Say.

21-PAGE REPORT

Call for Service of Ladder Truck; Ask Main Tests.

Increase in the personnel of the fire department from 13 to 28 men and the erection of a modern fire headquarters building on or near the site of the present building was recommended today in the report of the committee on fire prevention and engineering standards, National Board of Fire Underwriters, following an investigation made by Engineers George Tatnall, R. F. Goodhue and W. S. Rathbun, here last December.

The report, which covers 21 pages, is a review of the city's water supply, fire fighting equipment and fire department, together with structural conditions and hazards which were found here. The engineers spent approximately three weeks in their investigation.

In recommending the addition of at least 15 men to the fire fighting force, the report says that "the city has for many years jeopardized its citizens and its property by maintaining a fire department so seriously undermanned as to be almost useless for other than incipient fires requiring one or two hose lines and these conditions are reflected in a high loss per fire.

Conditions Serious.

"Since 1922 conditions have been more serious," the report continues. "In effect the protection available is that rendered by only one hose company, which also is so undermanned as to be handicapped in taking one hose line to the upper stories of a building. In addition this company

Five Men Nabbed In Gambling Raid Pay $120 in Fines

Fines totaling $120, were assessed by Municipal Judge J. C. Hanley today against five of the nine offenders who were apprehended in a gambling raid upon the home of Harry Bennett, 152 Ravine street, early Sunday morning.

Bennett, who was charged with permitting gambling was fined $50 and costs, while Francis Murphy, James Jamison, Fred Wayner and G. B. Floyd, charged with gambling, paid $16 each.

Similar charges against William Anson, Charles Woodruff, Jersey Dunn and Charles McCoy were dismissed.

Walter Main Circus at Patterson Field

Trumpet[illegible]ds,tooting calliopes, cavorting clowns, lumbering herds of elephants and camels, rumbling cages and tableau wagons, prancing horses in spangled accouterments, pretty women and handsome men— all these and more—took possession of the downtown streets shortly before noon today when the Walter L. Main Circus gave its daily street parade.

Through the densely-crowded streets the procession measured its gaudy passage—truly a fanastic panorama. By the side of the band wagons and behind the shrieking callipoes a cloud of boys kept tireless pace, reeling off block after block, but gorged with happiness. The tigers and lions looked bored, and the hyena yawned with accumulated ennui. Gorgeously costumed men and women riders with spangles and breastplates of shining gold and silver; richly-decked camels with riders from the great desert and the elephants swaying to and fro with monotonous tread; little clowns, big clowns, clowns of all shapes and sizes; beautiful tableau wagons of burnished gold and flaming red; the side-splitting clown band—a never-to-be-forgotten pageant of triumphal splendor.

Dr. Garland not only enjoys a wide practice in his profession, but he also holds a large interest in a chain of retail grocery stores in the southern states. Upon completing his visit, Dr. Garland expects to purchase a new car and motor to his southern home.

LAD CONVICTED IN SLAYING OF PATSY ANANIA RE-OPENS FIGHT

Judge W. F. Lones Hears Arguments in Lisbon Court.

APPEAL HINTED

Carbicella and Fusco Plead Guilty; Sentence Suspended.

Salvatore Rini, 22, East Liverpool, convicted of second degree murder in the death of Pasquale (Patsy) Anania, 25, of Wellsville, today re-opened his fight in common pleas court, Lisbon, to escape life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Rini's attorneys, W. O. O'Grady and Raymond Knepper, both of Wellsville, were to argue their motion for a new trial. Prosecutor Robert M. Brookes was prepared to oppose the motion.

Judge W. F. Lones, who is presiding, was expected to pronounce sentence in the event he decided to overrule the defense motion.

Possibility of the Rini case being carried to the appellate court, in event of an unfavorable decision by the lower tribunal, was hinted.

Carbicella-Fusco Case.

Rocco Carbicella and Frank Fusco, both of Wellsville, facing a new indictment charging an attempt to bribe Sheriff George Wright to "lay off" an investigation of the murder of Patrolman James Kenney, of Wellsville, changed their pleas from not guilty to guilty when their second trial was called shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Declaring he had taken into consideration the fact that they "had been improperly advised by other persons," Judge Lones sentenced them to serve from one to ten years in the penitentiary, and then suspended the sentence pending their good behavior. The two men, who have been at liberty under $5,000 bond each, are to report every 15 days to Sheriff Wright, who will act as parole officer.

Carbicella and Fusco, who are alleged to have offered $390 to Sheriff Wright, were found guilty in their first trial, but later granted another hearing. Today's trial was called on indictments returned by the grand jury on Jan. 5.

The accused men were represented by Attorneys Ben L. Bennett, East Liverpool, and W. A. O'Grady, Wellsville.

EIGHT ADDITIONAL U. S. DESTROYERS SEARCH FOR FRENCH AIRMEN WHO ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE ONE CHANCE IN THOUSAND FOR SAFETY

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Eight additional destroyers of the coast guard ram fleet have been sent out from New England ports to search for Captains Nungesser and Coli, missing trans-Atlantic fliers, it was announced at headquarters today.

The cutter Mojave, with an airplane aboard, is also out at sea.

One chance in a thousand was the faint hope held out by navy department officials for the safety of the missing aviators.

Two possibilities were suggested: That they have reached a deserted spot on the Labrador coast, or that they were picked up in mid-ocean by a steamer not equipped with wireless.

The sturdy plane is not floating in the mid-Atlantic with the two fliers clinging to it. Of this navy department officials are convinced.

"It is hardly conceivable that their plane could now be afloat," said Edward P. Warner, assistant secretary of the navy for air. "If a landing was made in a rough sea they may have been carried under the water almost instantaneously."

The fact that most of the course of the fliers was north of the ship lanes brought forward the possibility that they may have reached land on this side of the Atlantic. If so they may not be heard from for weeks.

Despite the putting to sea of naval vessels at Boston and the search undertaken by coast guard ships chances of finding bits of wreckage are said to be remote.

The aviators, it was pointed out by Warner, may have fallen at any place in an area of more than a million square miles. Therefore, it was indicated, the navy will not attempt to "blanket" the sea with searching vessels unless the French government should urgently request such action. The navy searched for Commander John Rodgers in the Pacific for several days when they knew within 100 miles of where he fell on the Hawaiian flight, it was pointed out.

When the French fliers discarded a powerful radio to save weight and chose a route north of the ship lanes to save distance they virtually cut themselves off from hope of rescue should disaster overtake them over the ocean, navy officials said.

The more optimistic naval aviators, feeling keenly the failure of the Frenchmen, pointed to the rescues of Harry Hawker and Lieut. Antonio Locatelli, after being lost in the Atlantic for days, and to the exploit of Commander Rodgers in the Pacific, to bolster their hope that they may yet be found.

Fog Over North Atlantic.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Despite careful and widespread search on both sides of the Atlantic and along the northern steamship lane by United States, Canadian, English and French warcraft, coast guard and merchant ships, no trace had been found today of Capt. Charles Nungesser, his fellow airman, Capt. Francois Coli, nor their airplane.

Bad weather and fog prevail over the north Atlantic are hampering the greatest international quest ever undertaken for a missing aviator.

It has not been more than 75 hours since Nungesser and his companion hopped off at Paris in the "White Bird" in their attempt to make a non-stop flight to New York, but in view of unfavorable conditions and the absence of any reassuring developments hope for the missing airmen is virtually abandoned.

Despite a cabled warning from Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, that the French people might misinterpret an attempt by American airmen to fly to Paris while Nungesser is missing, aviators Lloyd Bertaud and Clarence Chamberlin are making preparations to hop off from Curtiss field on Saturday morning if weather conditions permit. The Herrick warning was considered by officials of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, builders of the Bellanca plane in which Bertaud and Chamberlin plan to fly, but they decided to disregard it.

Government craft nosed slowly through the fog bound north Atlantic in hope of discovering some trace of the "White Bird," kept up continuel wireless communication with stations throughout the night, but reported that they had picked up no trace of the missing French plane.

PARIS, May 11.—At noon today no news of any kind had been received about the missing French aviators, Capt. Charles Nungesser and Capt. Francois Coli, and the hope that they might be found alive was rapidly waning.

Failure of searching ships to find any trace of the lost airmen and their plane, the "White Bird," intensified gloom which is grapping the French nation over the failure of the flight.

Salvatore Rini, 22, East Liverpool, convicted of second degree murder in the death of Pasquale (Patsy) Anania, 25, of Wellsville, today re-opened his fight in common pleas court, Lisbon, to escape life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Rini's attorneys, W. O. O'Grady and Raymond Knepper, both of Wellsville, were to argue their motion for a new trial. Prosecutor Robert M. Brookes was prepared to oppose the motion.

Carbicella-Fusco Case.

Rocco Carbicella and Frank Fusco, both of Wellsville, facing a new indictment charging an attempt to bribe Sheriff George Wright to "lay off" an investigation of the murder of Patrolman James Kenney, of Wellsville, changed their pleas from not guilty to guilty when their second trial was called shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Declaring he had taken into consideration the fact that they "had been improperly advised by other persons," Judge Lones sentenced them to serve from one to ten years in the penitentiary, and then suspended the sentence pending their good behavior. The two men, who have been at liberty under $5,000 bond each, are to report every 15 days to Sheriff Wright, who will act as parole officer.

Carbicella and Fusco, who are alleged to have offered $390 to Sheriff Wright, were found guilty in their first trial, but later granted another hearing. Today's trial was called on indictments returned by the grand jury on Jan. 5.

The accused men were represented by Attorneys Ben L. Bennett, East Liverpool, and W. A. O'Grady, Wellsville.

EIGHT ADDITIONAL U. S. DESTROYERS SEARCH FOR FRENCH AIRMEN WHO ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE ONE CHANCE IN THOUSAND FOR SAFETY

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Eight additional destroyers of the coast guard rum fleet have been sent out from New England ports to search for Captains Nungesser and Coli, missing trans-Atlantic fliers, it was announced at headquarters today.

The cutter Mojave, with an airplane aboard, is also out at sea.

One chance in a thousand was the faint hope held out by navy department officials for the safety of the missing aviators.

Two possibilities were suggested: That they have reached a deserted spot on the Labrador coast, or that they were picked up in mid-ocean by a steamer not equipped with wireless.

The sturdy plane is not floating in the mid-Atlantic with the two fliers clinging to it. Of this navy department officials are convinced.

"It is hardly conceivable that their plane could now be afloat," said Edward P. Warner, assistant secretary of the navy for air. "If a landing was made in a rough sea they may have been carried under the water almost instantaneously."

The fact that most of the course of the fliers was north of the ship lanes brought forward the possibility that they may have reached land on this side of the Atlantic. If so they may not be heard from for weeks.

Despite the putting to sea of naval vessels at Boston and the search undertaken by coast guard ships chances of finding bits of wreckage are said to be remote.

The aviators, it was pointed out by Warner, may have fallen at any place in an area of more than a million square miles. Therefore, it was indicated, the navy will not attempt to "blanket" the sea with searching vessels unless the French government should urgently request such action. The navy searched for Commander John Rodgers in the Pacific for several days when they knew within 100 miles of where he fell on the Hawaiian flight, it was pointed out.

When the French fliers discarded a powerful radio to save weight and chose a route north of the ship lanes to save distance they virtually cut themselves off from hope of rescue should disaster overtake them over the ocean, navy officials said.

The more optimistic naval aviators, feeling keenly the failure of the Frenchmen, pointed to the rescues of Harry Hawker and Lieut. Antonio Locatelli, after being lost in the Atlantic for days, and to the exploit of Commander Rodgers in the Pacific, to bolster their hope that they may yet be found.

Fog Over North Atlantic.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Despite careful and widespread search on both sides of the Atlantic and along the northern steamship lane by United States, Canadian, English and French warcraft, coast guard and merchant ships, no trace had been found today of Capt. Charles Nungesser, his fellow airman, Capt. Francois Coli, nor their airplane.

Bad weather and fog prevail over the north Atlantic are hampering the greatest international quest ever undertaken for a missing aviator.

It has not been more than 75 hours since Nungesser and his companion hopped off at Paris in the "White Bird" in their attempt to make a non-stop flight to New York, but in view of unfavorable conditions and the absence of any reassuring developments hope for the missing airmen is virtually abandoned.

Despite a cabled warning from Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, that the French people might misinterpret an attempt by American airmen to fly to Paris while Nungesser is missing, aviators Lloyd Bertaud and Clarence Chamberlin are making preparations to hop off from Curtiss field on Saturday morning if weather conditions permit. The Herrick warning was considered by officials of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, builders of the Bellanca plane in which Bertaud and Chamberlin plan to fly, but they decided to disregard it.

Government craft nosed slowly through the fog bound north Atlantic in hope of discovering some trace of the "White Bird" kept up continuel wireless communicatfon with stations throughout the night, but reported that they had picked up no trace of the missing French plane.

PARIS, May 11.—At noon today no news of any kind had been received about the missing French aviators, Capt. Charles Nungesser and Capt. Francois Coli, and the hope that they might be found alive was rapidly waning.

Failure of searching ships to find any trace of the lost airmen and their plane, the "White Bird," intensified gloom which is grapping the French nation over the failure of the flight.

Lindbergh Arrives in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, May 11.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh, former air pilot, flying in his plane the "Spirit of St. Louis," with which he hopes to hop across the Atlantic, arrived at 8:20 a. m. today at the Lambert flying field, on his non-stop flight from San D[illegible]

BOND'S SANITY BEING TESTED

Two Physicians Testify Former Auditor Mentally Unbalanced.

John C. Bond, former state auditor, is suffering from either paranoia or paresis, mental diseases, two physicians yesterday told a jury called in intermediate court to test his sanity.

While testimony of these witnesses was being presented by counsel for Bond, cross examination and the opening statement by state counsel indicated that they would question whether his condition was such that he could not distinguish between right and wrong contest any move to bar prosecution on charges of embezzlement on that ground.

Neither of the physicians who testified would say definitely in answer to questions by Bond's counsel that he could not distinguish between right and wrong, but both declared he was not sane. The first of these witnesses, Dr. George A. McQueen who practiced in Charleston for 20 years and attended Mr. Bond for a blood infection, to which he attributed large part of his patient's present mental ills, testified twice. The first occasion was before Judge H. K. Black and on the strength of that testimony and of "other information coming to the court, including the court's own observation of the defendant," the jury to hear the sanity issue was ordered.

Dr. McQueen repeated his testimony before the jury, begining with his treatment of Mr. Bond for the blood infection in 1912 or 1913. The patient failed to carry out that treatment to its conclusion, he said, and this he called one factor in the subsequent mental breakdown. After Mr. Bond's return from army service in France the physician noted a marked change, including greater nervousness and a part of the present condition might be attributed, he thought, to the nerve wearing experiences of the war. Infected tonsils and teeth to which Mr. Bond did not give proper care and excitement attending his entry into politics, he also included as factors.

His opinion was that Mr. Bond was suffering from either paranoia or the early stages of paresis, but which, he could not tell. Asked directly whether the effects of these would be for him not to know the consequences of his acts and lack moral responsibility, the doctor said he was not enough of a neurologist to tell. When asked again if he believed Mr. Bond could distinguish right from wrong, Dr. McQueen objected that the form of that question required by law was not fair to the witness because he thought no medical man could say positively as to that.

Lowman Looms as Favorite for Job Held by Haynes

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The controversy raging over the candidacy of Roy A. Haynes for the post of federal prohibition commissioner may be settled through the appointment of a compromise "bone-dry" prohibitionist, having the support of the Anti-Saloon league, it was reported today in administration circles.

The candidacy of Haynes, long a stalwart of the Anti-Saloon league, suffered a setback when both wet and dry spokesmen opened fire on his qualifications for the commissionership.

Administration leaders were known to be looking for a compromise candidate. Todate, the name of Seymour Lowman, a former lieutenant-governor of New York, has been the most frequently mentioned. Lowman has the endorsement of the New York Anti-Saloon league, numerous temperance societies, W. C. T. U. officials, and of Ogden Mills, assistant secretary of the treasury.

DINNER STORIES.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss!

A young woman walked into a bank the other day and stepping up to the window, said:

"I would like to open an account at this bank, please."

"We shall be very glad to accommodate you," said the teller. "What amount do you wish to deposit?"

"Oh," she said smiling, "I mean a regular charge account such as I have at the department stores."

"Did your friend completely recover from his broken leg?"

"No. Complications set in."

"How so?"

"He married his nurse!"

I'm Most Grateful Every Month

Here's glorious news for long-suffering womankind! To every woman who periodically has suffered pain. Menstruation need no longer be painful. And it is Science that is speaking!

Specialists have developed a tiny tablet called midol. It's a simple thing, utterly harmless to a girl of fourteen, but it brings relief in five to seven minutes. And is effective twelve hours or longer!

Midol it NOT a narcotic. It has no effect whatever on heart or nervous system. It acts directly on those organs affected by menstruation. They function normally, as they should, but the pain is banished. Complete relief—yes, perfect comfort —follows midol.

Tells Why He Can Now Eat Hearty

"A letter which I read in the paper about Carter's Little Liver Pills fitted my own case so closely that I could not help trying them and am very happy I did." So write's Mr. Frank J Trumbull of Jersey City, N. J., whose letter goes on to say: "I had heard about Carter's Little Liver Pills for years but never knew they helped overcome poor appetite and sour stomach until I read about another man in the same plight who took Carter's with good results. I tried them and can honestly say that they freed me of nasty gas on stomach, so that I can now eat without getting bilious, and they improved my appetite fully 100%. You can rest assured that from now on I will boost Carter's Little Liver Pills whenever I can."

Another Tragedy of The Air

Belief prevails today that the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, for which a prize of $25,000 has been offered, has been marked by another tragedy, for a two-day search has resulted in no trace of Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francois Coli, two daring French airmen who left Paris in their airplane, "White Bird," Sunday morning and were due to arrive in New York at noon Monday. The possibility remains that the intrepid war birds have flown north of their course and are somewhere in the desolate solitude of Laborador, or they were picked up by some fishing craft off the grand banks and may not be heard from for weeks. However, the opinion in the capitals of two continents is that both men are dead.

In the meantime, American aviators who are planning to hop off in the Bellanca monoplane for the French capital, after repairs to their craft which was damaged in the first attempt to leave the United States, have deferred their departure until the fate of the French flyers has been determined.

The public has been much distresses by the number of aviation casualties lately. Ten naval aviators have been killed within three weeks. Naturally outsiders wonder whether something is wrong. Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, made the following statement the other day:

"The recent naval aviation disasters, while most regrettable, should not be considered without first making a study of the history of aviation accidents during the preceding 12 months. During the 12 months ending March 26, 1927, over 20,000,000 passenger miles were flown by naval planes, during which time there were 19 deaths, or a death for every million miles traveled by the average aviator.

"The airplane is safer today than ever before, and the unfortunate deaths which have occurred during the last few weeks are not a fair criterion of either the safety of the airplane or the efficiency of the personnel operating them, but rather must be laid to the vagaries of fortune."

The public hopes this is so. Aviation must go forward. Its development cannot stop now. But the public would like to feel sure that there are no carelessness, no foolish hazards, no needless waste of human life.

French Forts

The world is surprised by the announcement that France is going to begin at once constructing a vast system of fortifications along her frontiers.

Next year's budget provides an enormous sum for building what is described as "a powerful series of defenses and fortresses at strong points, to be linked with the latest improved earthworks, with strategic highway, railways, airdromes, battery emplacements, troop-assembling shelters and other appurtenances that were demonstrated as necessities to the Great War."

Premier Poincare announces that a series of giant forts like those barring invasion from the east—Belfort, Metz, Toul and Verdun—will be built along the north frontier and through the Ardennes. And all this must be completed before the government will reduce the military service of conscripts to one year.

That stirs a universal sigh of discouragement. The need of such mighty and costly defenses was supposed to be past, even if "the war to end war" failed to accomplish its full purpose.

Are they really necessary? It is hard for Americans to think so. Where is the peril? From Germany, disarmed and apparently disposed to be friendly, or at least conciliatory? From Great Britain, which obviously wants no more war with any first-class power? From Russia, which is broken economically and politically, and far away? From Italy, strong-spirited but poor in resources? From America, which wants no more wars anywhere?

It is had for us to judge the necessities or appreciate the fears of France, but one thing at least it is safe to say: America should furnish no more money for any such purpose as that, to any European nation.

Tyrannies

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is lambasting Italian Fascism just as hard as he has lambasted Russian Communism, therein showing himself a pretty level-headed middle-of-the?roader in politics and economics.

Speaking of Mussolini's new "charter of labor," he says:

"The world has never witnessed a greater exhibition of autocracy gone mad. The 'charter' is a proclamation of enslavement, in that it reduces the working people to a condition of industrial servitude. It is a blow at human freedom, and sets up compulsory methods of industry for private initiative and freedom of contract.

"Evidently democracy in the affairs of the nation, as well as in industry throughout Italy, has perished."

He reminds the American public, however, that "autocracy cannot endure." All history proves that. The longer civilization continues, and the more highly civilized man becomes, the more frequently and more thoroughly democracy breaks through and asserts the basic human rights of personal freedom in thought and action, of private initiative and freedom of contract.

Americans who praise Fascism approve it for others—not for themselves. The typical American no more desires to live under the state tyranny of Fascism than the class of tyranny of Sovietism.

My Favorite Stories
By IRVIN S. COBB

LIVING PROOF

Complaint has been made that some of the so-called model houses which go up so fast in the suburban district of New York are built to be sold, not to be lived in.

Be that as it may, a little story is being told of a real estate dealer whose operations in the commuting zone have been highly successful. The only trouble is that he can't work the same side of the street twice.

He had snared a prospective buyer—one of those ten-dollar-down-and-ten-dollars-a-week-as-long-as-you-live prospects, and in his car the promoter took him out on Long Island to look at a cottage which he thought would just suit the needs of the customer.

The building was in the process of construction. It had been started on Monday; on Friday it would be ready for occupancy. But this was a Wednesday, and while the foundations were finished and the sides were up and the roof had been pasted on, the painting and the interior trim and the finishing touches were yet to be added.

The dealer led the proposed victim inside the structure. The plasterers were just concluding their part of the contract.

Now then," said the salesman, beaming with pride, "what do you think of this for a house?"

"Ain't she built kind of flimsy?" inquired the homeseeker.

"Flimsy? Flimsy?" screamed the indignant realtor. "You call this a flimys job? Wait, I'll show you.

"What?" asked Jim.

"Jim, step up close to the dividing wall between us. Get as close to it as you can."

"All right," said Jim, "here I am, almost touching it."

"Now, Jim, you can hear me speaking through the wal, can't you?"

'Sure."

"But you can't see me through this wall, can you, Jim?"

"Nope."

With a smile of triumph and satisfaction the promoter turned to the customer:

"Now, that's what I call a wall!" he said.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK ,May 11.—Second Avenue offers more colorful little cafes than almost any other section of Manhattan. There are those featuring favorite dishes of Armenia, Turkey, Rumania, Sweden and, of course, a large number of Kosher restaurants.

There is singular informality not found on Broadway or side streets. The proprietors join guests at tables to suggest choice foods. Dogs frolic around the floor and cats fluff their backs and plume their tails in friendliness.

Ancient patriarchs in skull caps sit in shadowy corners, puffing cigarettes in silence. Flapper news girls—potential Fannie Brices—drift in with the latest editions of Yiddish and American newspapers. In one there is a blind pianist who smokes cigars.

Children are not always welcomed and many of the menus carry the line, "Children Service—20 cents extra." All feature music of a better sort. There is Joseph Moskowitz, who plays the cymbalon in one and gives occasional high-brow recitals uptown.

There is no hurry of jazz. When Second Avenue dines out it is an all-evening event. They eat leisurely and remain until midnight to listen to the music, sing folk songs and exchange gossip. Some play dominoes, cubito or chuck dice.

A bottle of shelter is at each table and napkins are starched and standing. Horseradish is dyed red. And great plates of appetizers with a mixture of kraut, huge red peppers, chopped onions, pickled fish and such are free or 5 cents an order.

Celery beer is a favorite beverage of Second Avenue. Some cafes sell mild wines, but never cocktails or whisky. Such dishes as frigaroy on the stick, musht, captashala, bortsch, broiled peppers, stuffed fish, smoked goose and herring are popular.

Sidewalks in front of radio shops and gramophone stores on Second Avenue are always crowded if there is a free concert. Old men and shawled, wigged women bring their camp stools and perch along the curbs.

Jutting off Second Avenue are many old-fashioned boarding houses with basement dining rooms, papered in cheerful red. Boarders dine at long tables under gaudy chandeliers and afterward gather in front parlors with fern-trimmed windows, to discuss happenings of the day.

The Yiddish Art Theatre, criss-crossed with flamboyant posters, has a waiting line usually at dusk. Stage heroes and heroines are taken very seriously and most of the crowd is there for a peep at them. If one is sighted the cheering and applauding can be heard blocks waay. Old favorites are never forgotten.

There is a story of a woman of wealth going to a jaded straw blonde who had enamored her husband and asking her to clear out of the country in exchange for a $100,000 check.

"But he loves me," countered the blonde.

"Do you value his love at $100,000?"

There was a thoughtful silence and then a "Gimme the check, lady, you win." And that ended another Broadway love.

Love seems to curl up quickly in Manhattan. Recently a married couple gave an elaborate and sumptuous dinner at one of the smartest restaurants. Two mornings later the wife read of one of those "I will not be responsible for debts contracted by my wife" notices in the paper.

"What happened?" telephoned a friend.

"He met a new charmer at our party," was the laconic reply. "She's in—I'm out."

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Research Associates.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Practical aids to American industry are constanly being furnished by the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce through what are known as its research associates. Back in 1901 Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, one of the most outstanding scientists which the country has produced, proposed that Congress enact a law which would throw the bureaus of the government open to the uses of private industry. In connection with his experimentation resulting in the invention of the telephone, Dr. Bell found that the government had information and facilities which could materially assist inventors.

The privilege of using government material lies in the discretion of heads of the various bureaus, but no serious effort for the betterment of some product, although produced by a private corporation, ever is refused.

The list of industries which are being aided in their productive work is a long one. The industries themselves pay the salaries of the research experts but the work is done chiefly in the government's own laboratories. Every important industry has some sort of trade association of which the individual manufacturers or producers are members, paying dues or in some way contributing to the support of the organization. The coal industry, for instance, has an association the members of which are operators. They pay a fraction of a cent on every ton of coal they take from their mines. In this way the distribution of cost is equitable, the big operator paying in proportion to his output and the small one left free from an undue burden. All, however, participate equally in the benefits derived from the research work done on behalf of the organization.

Nor is the privilege of sharing in the benefits of research conducted with the cooperation of the American government confined to organizations of the United States. Foreign associations may participate provided they meet the requirements of the bureau. For instance the Academy of Science Engineers of Stockholm in Sweden is acoorded research privileges.

Number Increases Steadily.

When the plan first was adopted in 1901 theer were but ten research associates admitted to the government laboratories. Now there are sixty-one and it seems possible that this number will increase as the industries are coming more and more to realize the value of government assistance.

Typical work of this type includes the study of metallurgy, the welding of railway rails, structural materials in the study of which tensile strength, endurance under water, under changes of temperature, and such matters are tested; textiles, paper, dyes, the ability of various building materials to resist fire, acoustics involving the study of how various buildings materials react to sound waves, radio, automobile fuels, and a host of other things.

One of the especially interesting laboratories of the Bureau of Standards is that in which airplane propellers are tested. The process is called "testing to destruction." There is a building constructed of very heavy materials, usually thick walls and roof.

An airplane motor is set in position in this building and the motor turned on. The researchers stand outside the building and peep through small openings in the walls. By the use of an electric connection they then turn the motor faster and faster. Ultimately the tremendous centrifugal speed causes the propeller to fly to pieces. Were a man inside the building he probably would be killed by the bits of wood flying at immense velocity.

By this test the scientists determine what kinds of wood can stand the greatest centrifugal force, and, in accordance with their findings, recommendations are made for specifications for Army and Navy planes and the data made available to commercial companies.

Another interesting machine is one which tests the strength of steel beams. It is important for structural engineers such as bridge builders and erectors of skyscrappers to know how much pressure can be withstood by a steel beam of given dimensions. The machine consists of two huge pieces of steel connected by a series of powerful screws. The steel beam to be tested is placed endwise between the

Belief prevails today that the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, for which a prize of $25,000 has been offered, has been marked by another tragedy, for a two-day search has resulted in no trace of Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francois Coli, two daring French airmen who left Paris in their airplane, "White Bird," Sunday morning and were due to arrive in New York at noon Monday. The possibility remains that the intrepid war birds have flown north of their course and are somewhere in the desolate solitude of Laborador, or they were picked up by some fishing craft off the grand banks and may not be heard from for weeks. However, the opinion in the capitals of two continents is that both men are dead.

In the meantime, American aviators who are planning to hop off in the Bellanca monoplane for the French capital, after repairs to their craft which was damaged in the first attempt to leave the United States, have deferred their departure until the fate of the French flyers has been determined.

The public has been much distresses by the number of aviation casualties lately. Ten naval aviators have been killed within three weeks. Naturally outsiders wonder whether something is wrong. Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, made the following statement the other day:

"The recent naval aviation disasters, while most regrettable, should not be considered without first making a study of the history of aviation accidents during the preceding 12 months. During the 12 months ending March 26, 1927, over 20,000,000 passenger miles were flown by naval planes, during which time there were 19 deaths, or a death for every million miles traveled by the average aviator.

"The airplane is safer today than ever before, and the unfortunate deaths which have occurred during the last few weeks are not a fair criterion of either the safety of the airplane or the efficiency of the personnel operating them, but rather must be laid to the vagaries of fortune."

The public hopes this is so. Aviation must go forward. Its development cannot stop now. But the public would like to feel sure that there are no carelessness, no foolish hazards, no needless waste of human life.

French Forts

The world is surprised by the announcement that France is going to begin at once constructing a vast system of fortifications along her frontiers.

Next year's budget provides an enormous sum for building what is described as "a powerful series of defenses and fortresses at strong points, to be linked with the latest improved earthworks, with strategic highway, railways, airdromes, battery emplacements, troop-assembling shelters and other appurtenances that were demonstrated as necessities to the Great War."

Premier Poincare announces that a series of giant forts like those barring invasion from the east—Belfort, Metz, Toul and Verdun—will be built along the north frontier and through the Ardennes. And all this must be completed before the government will reduce the military service of conscripts to one year.

That stirs a universal sigh of discouragement. The need of such mighty and costly defenses was supposed to be past, even if "the war to end war" failed to accomplish its full purpose.

Are they really necessary? It is hard for Americans to think so. Where is the peril? From Germany, disarmed and apparently disposed to be friendly, or at least conciliatory? From Great Britain, which obviously wants no more war with any first-class power? From Russia, which is broken economically and politically, and far away? From Italy, strong-spirited but poor in resources? From America, which wants no more wars anywhere?

It is had for us to judge the necessities or appreciate the fears of France, but one thing at least it is safe to say: America should furnish no more money for any such purpose as that, to any European nation.

Tyrannies

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is lambasting Italian Fascism just as hard as he has lambasted Russian Communism, therein showing himself a pretty level-headed middle-of-the?roader in politics and economics.

Speaking of Mussolini's new "charter of labor," he says:

"The world has never witnessed a greater exhibition of autocracy gone mad. The 'charter' is a proclamation of enslavement, in that it reduces the working people to a condition of industrial servitude. It is a blow at human freedom, and sets up compulsory methods of industry for private initiative and freedom of contract.

"Evidently democracy in the affairs of the nation, as well as in industry throughout Italy, has perished."

He reminds the American public, however, that "autocracy cannot endure." All history proves that. The longer civilization continues, and the more highly civilized man becomes, the more frequently and more thoroughly democracy breaks through and asserts the basic human rights of personal freedom in thought and action, of private initiative and freedom of contract.

Americans who praise Fascism approve it for others—not for themselves. The typical American no more desires to live under the state tyranny of Fascism than the class of tyranny of Sovietism.

LIVING PROOF

Complaint has been made that some of the so-called model houses which go up so fast in the suburban district of New York are built to be sold, not to be lived in.

Be that as it may, a little story is being told of a real estate dealer whose operations in the commuting zone have been highly successful. The only trouble is that he can't work the same side of the street twice.

He had snared a prospective buyer—one of those ten-dollar-down-and-ten-dollars-a-week-as-long-as-you-live prospects, and in his car the promoter took him out on Long Island to look at a cottage which he thought would just suit the needs of the customer.

The building was in the process of construction. It had been started on Monday; on Friday it would be ready for occupancy. But this was a Wednesday, and while the foundations were finished and the sides were up and the roof had been pasted on, the painting and the interior trim and the finishing touches were yet to be added.

The dealer led the proposed victim inside the structure. The plasterers were just concluding their part of the contract.

Now then," said the salesman, beaming with pride, "what do you think of this for a house?"

"Ain't she built kind of flimsy?" inquired the homeseeker.

"Flimsy? Flimsy?" screamed the indignant realtor. "You call this a flimys job? Wait, I'll show you.

"What?" asked Jim.

"Jim, step up close to the dividing wall between us. Get as close to it as you can."

"All right," said Jim, "here I am, almost touching it."

"Now, Jim, you can hear me speaking through the wal, can't you?"

'Sure."

"But you can't see me through this wall, can you, Jim?"

"Nope."

With a smile of triumph and satisfaction the promoter turned to the customer:

"Now, that's what I call a wall!" he said.

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Research Associates.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Practical aids to American industry are constanly being furnished by the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce through what are known as its research associates. Back in 1901 Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, one of the most outstanding scientists which the country has produced, proposed that Congress enact a law which would throw the bureaus of the government open to the uses of private industry. In connection with his experimentation resulting in the invention of the telephone, Dr. Bell found that the government had information and facilities which could materially assist inventors.

The privilege of using government material lies in the discretion of heads of the various bureaus, but no serious effort for the betterment of some product, although produced by a private corporation, ever is refused.

The list of industries which are being aided in their productive work is a long one. The industries themselves pay the salaries of the research experts but the work is done chiefly in the government's own laboratories. Every important industry has some sort of trade association of which the individual manufacturers or producers are members, paying dues or in some way contributing to the support of the organization. The coal industry, for instance, has an association the members of which are operators. They pay a fraction of a cent on every ton of coal they take from their mines. In this way the distribution of cost is equitable, the big operator paying in proportion to his output and the small one left free from an undue burden. All, however, participate equally in the benefits derived from the research work done on behalf of the organization.

Nor is the privilege of sharing in the benefits of research conducted with the cooperation of the American government confined to organizations of the United States. Foreign associations may participate provided they meet the requirements of the bureau. For instance the Academy of Science Engineers of Stockholm in Sweden is accorded research privileges.

Number Increases Steadily.

When the plan first was adopted in 1901 theer were but ten research associates admitted to the government laboratories. Now there are sixty-one and it seems possible that this number will increase as the industries are coming more and more to realize the value of government assistance.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 11.—Second Avenue offers more colorful little cafes than almost any other section of Manhattan. There are those featuring favorite dishes of Armenia, Turkey, Rumania, Sweden and, of course, a large number of Kosher restaurants.

There is singular informality not found on Broadway or side streets. The proprietors join guests at tables to suggest choice foods. Dogs frolic around the floor and cats fluff their backs and plume their tails in friendliness.

Ancient patriarchs in skull caps sit in shadowy corners, puffing cigarettes in silence. Flapper news girls—potential Fannie Brices—drift in with the latest editions of Yiddish and American newspapers. In one there is a blind pianist who smokes cigars.

Children are not always welcomed and many of the menus carry the line, "Children Service—20 cents extra." All feature music of a better sort. There is Joseph Moskowitz, who plays the cymbalon in one and gives occasional high-brow recitals uptown.

There is no hurry of jazz. When Second Avenue dines out it is an all-evening event. They eat leisurely and remain until midnight to listen to the music, sing folk songs and exchange gossip. Some play dominoes, cubito or chuck dice.

A bottle of shelter is at each table and napkins are starched and standing. Horseradish is dyed red. And great plates of appetizers with a mixture of kraut, huge red peppers, chopped onions, pickled fish and such are free or 5 cents an order.

Celery beer is a favorite beverage of Second Avenue. Some cafes sell mild wines, but never cocktails or whisky. Such dishes as frigaroy on the stick, mushi, captashala, bortsch, broiled peppers, stuffed fish, smoked goose, and herring are popular.

Sidewalks in front of radio shops and gramophone stores on Second Avenue are always crowded if there is a free concert. Old men and shawled, wigged women bring their camp stools and perch along the curbs.

Jutting off Second Avenue are many old-fashioned boarding houses with basement dining rooms, papered in cheerful red. Boarders dine at long tables under gaudy chandeliers and afterward gather in front parlors with fern-trimmed windows, to discuss happenings of the day.

The Yiddish Art Theatre, criss-crossed with flamboyant posters, has a waiting line usually at dusk. Stage heroes and heroines are taken very seriously and most of the crowd is there for a peep at them. If one is sighted the cheering and applauding can be heard blocks waay. Old favorites are never forgotten.

There is a story of a woman of wealth going to a jaded straw blonde who had enamored her husband and asking her to clear out of the country in exchange for a $100,000 check.

"But he loves me," countered the blonde.

"Do you value his love at $100,000?"

There was a thoughtful silence and then a "Gimme the check, lady, you win." And that ended another Broadway love.

Love seems to curl up quickly in Manhattan. Recently a married couple gave an elaborate and sumptuous dinner at one of the smartest restaurants. Two mornings later the wife read of one of those "I will not be responsible for debts contracted by my wife" notices in the paper.

"What happened?" telephoned a friend.

"He met a new charmer at our party," was the laconic reply. "She's in—I'm out."

Strength Sapped By Overwork Rebuilt by Tanlac

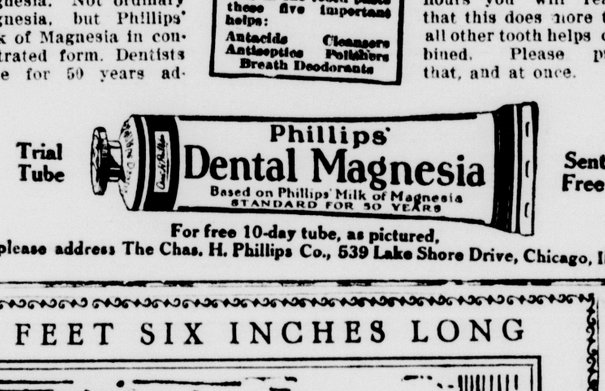

Ben Romano broke under long hours and heavy work. On verge of breakdown, tried Tanlac and regained lost vitality. Praises Tanlac highly.

Ben Romano lives at 799 Bowery St., Akron Ohio. A native of Birmingham, Ala., he has a host of friend in that city. While working for the Sloss-Sheffield Iron Company there he spared no effort to succeed, putting all his strength and energy into his work. "Lugging pig iron ten hours a day takes strength and vitality," said Mr. Romano, "and in the end it got me. For three months I was played out, nervous—on the verge of a breakdown.

"My stomach and liver went back on me, and heartburn, gas and sourness, kept me in constant misery. I could neither eat, sleep nor digest normally, so grew steadily weaker. Shortly before coming to Akron I started on Tanlac and have been in the pink of condition ever since. My friends would congratulate me on my improvement and I would always say that Tanlac and nothing else is responsible for the change. It certainly put an end to my troubles."

"If you feel below par, try Tanlac, nature's own tonic and body builder. Made from barks, roots and herbs. Your druggist has Tanlac. Over 52 million bottles sold.

Glistening teeth can bring you

We urge you to see how easily your teeth can be whitened, and what a vast difference it makes. Learn how your breath can be purified. And how many other essential results can come with these—at once.

The way is Phillips' Dental Magnesia tooth paste. Some 50 experts collaborated on it, to give you in one application the utmost modern science offers for the teeth and gums.

Here are combined the best ways known to whiten teeth, to combat mouth germs and to purify the breath.

But here, above all, is magnesia. Not ordinary magnesia, but Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in concentrated form. Dentists have for 50 years advised this for daily use on teeth and gums.

Magnesia neutralizes acids. Acids, formed by sugar and starches, are the greatest foes to teeth and gums. One touch of magnesia kills those acids. And Phillips' Dental Magnesia applies magnesia between the teeth and in crevices to protect you night and day from acid attacks.

Here are five important helps in one tooth paste. Here are all the best protectors, at their utmost, in a single application. You should see what it means to you. Within 24 hours you will realize that this does more than all other tooth helps combined. Please prove that, and at once.

Strength Sapped By Overwork Rebuilt by Tanlac

Ben Romano broke under long hours and heavy work. On verge of breakdown, tried Tanlac and regained lost vitality. Praises Tanlac highly.

Ben Romano lives at 799 Bowery St., Akron Ohio. A native of Birmingham, Ala., he has a host of friend in that city. While working for the Sloss-Sheffield Iron Company there he spared no effort to succeed, putting all his strength and energy into his work. "Lugging pig iron ten hours a day takes strength and vitality," said Mr. Romano, "and in the end it got me. For three months I was played out, nervous—on the verge of a break down.

"My stomach and liver went back on me, and heartburn, gas and sourness, kept me in constant misery. I could neither eat, sleep nor digest normally, so grew steadily weaker. Shortly before coming to Akron I started on Tanlac and have been in the pink of condition ever since. My friends would congratulate me on my improvement and I would always say that Tanlac and nothing else is responsible for the change. It certainly put an end to my troubles."

"If you feel below par, try Tanlac, nature's own tonic and body builder. Made from barks, roots and herbs. Your druggist has Tanlac. Over 52 million bottles sold.

Another Tragedy of The Air

Belief prevails today that the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, for which a prize of $25,000 has been offered, has been marked by another tragedy, for a two-day search has resulted in no trace of Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francois Coli, two daring French airmen who left Paris in their airplane, "White Bird," Sunday morning and were due to arrive in New York at noon Monday. The possibility remains that the intrepid war birds have flown north of their course and are somewhere in the desolate solitude of Laborador, or they were picked up by some fishing craft off the grand banks and may not be heard from for weeks. However, the opinion in the capitals of two continents is that both men are dead.

In the meantime, American aviators who are planning to hop off in the Bellanca monoplane for the French capital, after repairs to their craft which was damaged in the first attempt to leave the United States, have deferred their departure until the fate of the French flyers has been determined.

The public has been much distresses by the number of aviation casualties lately. Ten naval aviators have been killed within three weeks. Naturally outsiders wonder whether something is wrong. Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, made the following statement the other day:

"The recent naval aviation disasters, while most regrettable, should not be considered without first making a study of the history of aviation accidents during the preceding 12 months. During the 12 months ending March 26, 1927, over 20,000,000 passenger miles were flown by naval planes, during which time there were 19 deaths, or a death for every million miles traveled by the average aviator.

"The airplane is safer today than ever before, and the unfortunate deaths which have occurred during the last few weeks are not a fair criterion of either the safety of the airplane or the efficiency of the personnel operating them, but rather must be laid to the vagaries of fortune."

The public hopes this is so. Aviation must go forward. Its development cannot stop now. But the public would like to feel sure that there are no carelessness, no foolish hazards, no needless waste of human life.

French Forts

The world is surprised by the announcement that France is going to begin at once constructing a vast system of fortifications along her frontiers.

Next year's budget provides an enormous sum for building what is described as "a powerful series of defenses and fortresses at strong points, to be linked with the latest improved earthworks, with strategic highway, railways, airdromes, battery emplacements, troop-assembling shelters and other appurtenances that were demonstrated as necessities to the Great War."

Premier Poincare announces that a series of giant forts like those barring invasion from the east—Belfort, Metz, Toul and Verdun—will be built along the north frontier and through the Ardennes. And all this must be completed before the government will reduce the military service of conscripts to one year.

That stirs a universal sigh of discouragement. The need of such mighty and costly defenses was supposed to be past, even if "the war to end war" failed to accomplish its full purpose.

Are they really necessary? It is hard for Americans to think so. Where is the peril? From Germany, disarmed and apparently disposed to be friendly, or at least conciliatory? From Great Britain, which obviously wants no more war with any first-class power? From Russia, which is broken economically and politically, and far away? From Italy, strong-spirited but poor in resources? From America, which wants no more wars anywhere?

It is had for us to judge the necessities or appreciate the fears of France, but one thing at least it is safe to say: America should furnish no more money for any such purpose as that, to any European nation.

Tyrannies

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is lambasting Italian Fascism just as hard as he has lambasted Russian Communism, therein showing himself a pretty level-headed middle-of-the?roader in politics and economics.

Speaking of Mussolini's new "charter of labor," he says:

"The world has never witnessed a greater exhibition of autocracy gone mad. The 'charter' is a proclamation of enslavement, in that it reduces the working people to a condition of industrial servitude. It is a blow at human freedom, and sets up compulsory methods of industry for private initiative and freedom of contract.

"Evidently democracy in the affairs of the nation, as well as in industry throughout Italy, has perished."

He reminds the American public, however, that "autocracy cannot endure." All history proves that. The longer civilization continues, and the more highly civilized man becomes, the more frequently and more thoroughly democracy breaks through and asserts the basic human rights of personal freedom in thought and action, of private initiative and freedom of contract.

Americans who praise Fascism approve it for others—not for themselves. The typical American no more desires to live under the state tyranny of Fascism than the class of tyranny of Sovietism.

My Favorite Stories

LIVING PROOF

Complaint has been made that some of the so-called model houses which go up so fast in the suburban district of New York are built to be sold, not to be lived in.

Be that as it may, a little story is being told of a real estate dealer whose operations in the commuting zone have been highly successful. The only trouble is that he can't work the same side of the street twice.

He had snared a prospective buyer—one of those ten-dollar-down-and-ten-dollars-a-week-as-long-as-you-live prospects, and in his car the promoter took him out on Long Island to look at a cottage which he thought would just suit the needs of the customer.

The building was in the process of construction. It had been started on Monday; on Friday it would be ready for occupancy. But this was a Wednesday, and while the foundations were finished and the sides were up and the roof had been pasted on, the painting and the interior trim and the finishing touches were yet to be added.

The dealer led the proposed victim inside the structure. The plasterers were just concluding their part of the contract.

Now then," said the salesman, beaming with pride, "what do you think of this for a house?"

"Ain't she built kind of flimsy?" inquired the homeseeker.

"Flimsy? Flimsy?" screamed the indignant realtor. "You call this a flimsy job? Wait, I'll show you.

"What?" asked Jim.

"Jim, step up close to the dividing wall between us. Get as close to it as you can."

"All right," said Jim, "here I am, almost touching it."

"Now, Jim, you can hear me speaking through the wal, can't you?"

"Sure."

"But you can't see me through this wall, can you, Jim?"

"Nope."

With a smile of triumph and satisfaction the promoter turned to the customer:

"Now, that's what I call a wall!" he said.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 11.—Second Avenue offers more colorful little cafes than almost any other section of Manhattan. There are those featuring favorite dishes of Armenia, Turkey, Rumania, Sweden and, of course, a large number of Kosher restaurants.

There is singular informality not found on Broadway or side streets. The proprietors join guests at tables to suggest choice foods. Dogs frolic around the floor and cats fluff their backs and plume their tails in friendliness.

Ancient patriarchs in skull caps sit in shadowy corners, puffing cigarettes in silence. Flapper news girls—potential Fannie Brices—drift in with the latest editions of Yiddish and American newspapers. In one there is a blind pianist who smokes cigars.

Children are not always welcomed and many of the menus carry the line, "Children Service—20 cents extra." All feature music of a better sort. There is Joseph Moskowitz, who plays the cymbalon in one and gives occasional high-brow recitals uptown.

There is no hurry of jazz. When Second Avenue dines out it is an all-evening event. They eat leisurely and remain until midnight to listen to the music, sing folk songs and exchange gossip. Some play dominoes, cubito or chuck dice.

A bottle of shelter is at each table and napkins are starched and standing. Horseradish is dyed red. And great plates of appetizers with a mixture of kraut, huge red peppers, chopped onions, pickled fish and such are free or 5 cents an order.

Celery beer is a favorite beverage of Second Avenue. Some cafes sell mild wines, but never cocktails or whisky. Such dishes as frigaroy on the stick, musht, captashala, bortsch, broiled peppers, stuffed fish, smoked goose, and herring are popular.

Sidewalks in front of radio shops and gramophone stores on Second Avenue are always crowded if there is a free concert. Old men and shawled, wigged women bring their camp stools and perch along the curbs.

Jutting off Second Avenue are many old-fashioned boarding houses with basement dining rooms, papered in cheerful red. Boarders dine at long tables under gaudy chandeliers and afterward gather in front parlors with fern-trimmed windows, to discuss happenings of the day.

The Yiddish Art Theatre, criss-crossed with flamboyant posters, has a waiting line usually at dusk. Stage heroes and heroines are taken very seriously and most of the crowd is there for a peep at them. If one is sighted the cheering and applauding can be heard blocks waay. Old favorites are never forgotten.

There is a story of a woman of wealth going to a jaded straw blonde who had enamored her husband and asking her to clear out of the country in exchange for a $100,000 check.

"But he loves me," countered the blonde.

"Do you value his love at $100,000?"

There was a thoughtful silence and then a "Gimme the check, lady, you win." And that ended another Broadway love.

Love seems to curl up quickly in Manhattan. Recently a married couple gave an elaborate and sumptuous dinner at one of the smartest restaurants. Two mornings later the wife read of one of those "I will not be responsible for debts contracted by my wife" notices in the paper.

"What happened?" telephoned a friend.

"He met a new charmer at our party," was the laconic reply. "She's in—I'm out."

HASKIN'S LETTER

Research Associates.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Practical aids to American industry are constanly being furnished by the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce through what are known as its research associates. Back in 1901 Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, one of the most outstanding scientists which the country has produced, proposed that Congress enact a law which would throw the bureaus of the government open to the uses of private industry. In connection with his experimentation resulting in the invention of the telephone, Dr. Bell found that the government had information and facilities which could materially assist inventors.

The privilege of using government material lies in the discretion of heads of the various bureaus, but no serious effort for the betterment of some product, although produced by a private corporation, ever is refused.

The list of industries which are being aided in their productive work is a long one. The industries themselves pay the salaries of the research experts but the work is done chiefly in the government's own laboratories. Every important industry has some sort of trade association of which the individual manufacturers or producers are members, paying dues or in some way contributing to the support of the organization. The coal industry, for instance, has an association the members of which are operators. They pay a fraction of a cent on every ton of coal they take from their mines. In this way the distribution of cost is equitable, the big operator paying in proportion to his output and the small one left free from an undue burden. All, however, participate equally in the benefits derived from the research work done on behalf of the organization.

Nor is the privilege of sharing in the benefits of research conducted with the cooperation of the American government confined to organizations of the United States. Foreign associations may participate provided they meet the requirements of the bureau. For instance the Academy of Science Engineers of Stockholm in Sweden is accorded research privileges.

Number Increases Steadily.

When the plan first was adopted in 1901 theer were but ten research associates admitted to the government laboratories. Now there are sixty-one and it seems possible that this number will increase as the industries are coming more and more to realize the value of government assistance.

Typical work of this type includes the study of metallurgy, the welding of railway rails, structural materials in the study of which tensile strength, endurance under water, under changes of temperature, and such matters are tested; textiles, paper, dyes, the ability of various building materials to resist fire, acoustics involving the study of how various buildings materials react to sound waves, radio, automobile fuels, and a host of other things.

One of the especially interesting laboratories of the Bureau of Standards is that in which airplane propellers are tested. The process is called "testing to destruction." There is a building constructed of very heavy materials, usually thick walls and roof.

An airplane motor is set in position in this building and the motor turned on. The researchers stand outside the building and peep through small openings in the walls. By the use of an electric connection they then turn the motor faster and faster. Ultimately the tremendous centrifugal speed causes the propeller to fly to pieces. Were a man inside the building he probably would be killed by the bits of wood flying at immense velocity.

By this test the scientists determine what kinds of wood can stand the greatest centrifugal force, and, in accordance with their findings, recommendations are made for specifications for Army and Navy planes and the data made available to commercial companies.

Another interesting machine is one which tests the strength of steel beams. It is important for structural engineers such as bridge builders and erectors of skyscrappers to know how much pressure can be withstood by a steel beam of given dimensions. The machine consists of two huge pieces of steel connected by a series of powerful screws. The steel beam to be tested is placed endwise between the

Belief prevails today that the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, for which a prize of $25,000 has been offered, has been marked by another tragedy, for a two-day search has resulted in no trace of Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francois Coli, two daring French airmen who left Paris in their airplane, "White Bird," Sunday morning and were due to arrive in New York at noon Monday. The possibility remains that the intrepid war birds have flown north of their course and are somewhere in the desolate solitude of Laborador, or they were picked up by some fishing craft off the grand banks and may not be heard from for weeks. However, the opinion in the capitals of two continents is that both men are dead.

In the meantime, American aviators who are planning to hop off in the Bellanca monoplane for the French capital, after repairs to their craft which was damaged in the first attempt to leave the United States, have deferred their departure until the fate of the French flyers has been determined.

The public has been much distresses by the number of aviation casualties lately. Ten naval aviators have been killed within three weeks. Naturally outsiders wonder whether something is wrong. Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, made the following statement the other day:

"The recent naval aviation disasters, while most regrettable, should not be considered without first making a study of the history of aviation accidents during the preceding 12 months. During the 12 months ending March 26, 1927, over 20,000,000 passenger miles were flown by naval planes, during which time there were 19 deaths, or a death for every million miles traveled by the average aviator.

"The airplane is safer today than ever before, and the unfortunate deaths which have occurred during the last few weeks are not a fair criterion of either the safety of the airplane or the efficiency of the personnel operating them, but rather must be laid to the vagaries of fortune."

The public hopes this is so. Aviation must go forward. Its development cannot stop now. But the public would like to feel sure that there are no carelessness, no foolish hazards, no needless waste of human life.

French Forts

The world is surprised by the announcement that France is going to begin at once constructing a vast system of fortifications along her frontiers.

Next year's budget provides an enormous sum for building what is described as "a powerful series of defenses and fortresses at strong points, to be linked with the latest improved earthworks, with strategic highway, railways, airdromes, battery emplacements, troop-assembling shelters and other appurtenances that were demonstrated as necessities to the Great War."

Premier Poincare announces that a series of giant forts like those barring invasion from the east—Belfort, Metz, Toul and Verdun—will be built along the north frontier and through the Ardennes. And all this must be completed before the government will reduce the military service of conscripts to one year.

That stirs a universal sigh of discouragement. The need of such mighty and costly defenses was supposed to be past, even if "the war to end war" failed to accomplish its full purpose.

Are they really necessary? It is hard for Americans to think so. Where is the peril? From Germany, disarmed and apparently disposed to be friendly, or at least conciliatory? From Great Britain, which obviously wants no more war with any first-class power? From Russia, which is broken economically and politically, and far away? From Italy, strong-spirited but poor in resources? From America, which wants no more wars anywhere?

It is had for us to judge the necessities or appreciate the fears of France, but one thing at least it is safe to say: America should furnish no more money for any such purpose as that, to any European nation.

Tyrannies

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is lambasting Italian Fascism just as hard as he has lambasted Russian Communism, therein showing himself a pretty level-headed middle-of-the?roader in politics and economics.

Speaking of Mussolini's new "charter of labor," he says:

"The world has never witnessed a greater exhibition of autocracy gone mad. The 'charter' is a proclamation of enslavement, in that it reduces the working people to a condition of industrial servitude. It is a blow at human freedom, and sets up compulsory methods of industry for private initiative and freedom of contract.

"Evidently democracy in the affairs of the nation, as well as in industry throughout Italy, has perished."

He reminds the American public, however, that "autocracy cannot endure." All history proves that. The longer civilization continues, and the more highly civilized man becomes, the more frequently and more thoroughly democracy breaks through and asserts the basic human rights of personal freedom in thought and action, of private initiative and freedom of contract.

Americans who praise Fascism approve it for others—not for themselves. The typical American no more desires to live under the state tyranny of Fascism than the class of tyranny of Sovietism.

LIVING PROOF

Complaint has been made that some of the so-called model houses which go up so fast in the suburban district of New York are built to be sold, not to be lived in.

Be that as it may, a little story is being told of a real estate dealer whose operations in the commuting zone have been highly successful. The only trouble is that he can't work the same side of the street twice.

He had snared a prospective buyer—one of those ten-dollar-down-and-ten-dollars-a-week-as-long-as-you-live prospects, and in his car the promoter took him out on Long Island to look at a cottage which he thought would just suit the needs of the customer.

The building was in the process of construction. It had been started on Monday; on Friday it would be ready for occupancy. But this was a Wednesday, and while the foundations were finished and the sides were up and the roof had been pasted on, the painting and the interior trim and the finishing touches were yet to be added.

The dealer led the proposed victim inside the structure. The plasterers were just concluding their part of the contract.

Now then," said the salesman, beaming with pride, "what do you think of this for a house?"

"Ain't she built kind of flimsy?" inquired the homeseeker.

"Flimsy? Flimsy?" screamed the indignant realtor. "You call this a flimsy job? Wait, I'll show you.

"What?" asked Jim.

"Jim, step up close to the dividing wall between us. Get as close to it as you can."

"All right," said Jim, "here I am, almost touching it."

"Now, Jim, you can hear me speaking through the wal, can't you?"

'Sure."

"But you can't see me through this wall, can you, Jim?"

"Nope."

With a smile of triumph and satisfaction the promoter turned to the customer:

"Now, that's what I call a wall!" he said.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 11.—Second Avenue offers more colorful little cafes than almost any other section of Manhattan. There are those featuring favorite dishes of Armenia, Turkey, Rumania, Sweden and, of course, a large number of Kosher restaurants.

There is singular informality not found on Broadway or side streets. The proprietors join guests at tables to suggest choice foods. Dogs frolic around the floor and cats fluff their backs and plume their tails in friendliness.

Ancient patriarchs in skull caps sit in shadowy corners, puffing cigarettes in silence. Flapper news girls—potential Fannie Brices—drift in with the latest editions of Yiddish and American newspapers. In one there is a blind pianist who smokes cigars.

Children are not always welcomed and many of the menus carry the line, "Children Service—20 cents extra." All feature music of a better sort. There is Joseph Moskowitz, who plays the cymbalon in one and gives occasional high-brow recitals uptown.

There is no hurry of jazz. When Second Avenue dines out it is an all-evening event. They eat leisurely and remain until midnight to listen to the music, sing folk songs and exchange gossip. Some play dominoes, cubito or chuck dice.

A bottle of shelter is at each table and napkins are starched and standing. Horseradish is dyed red. And great plates of appetizers with a mixture of kraut, huge red peppers, chopped onions, pickled fish and such are free or 5 cents an order.

Celery beer is a favorite beverage of Second Avenue. Some cafes sell mild wines, but never cocktails or whisky. Such dishes as frigaroy on the stick, musht, captashala, bortsch, broiled peppers, stuffed fish, smoked goose, and herring are popular.

Sidewalks in front of radio shops and gramophone stores on Second Avenue are always crowded if there is a free concert. Old men and shawled, wigged women bring their camp stools and perch along the curbs.

Jutting off Second Avenue are many old-fashioned boarding houses with basement dining rooms, papered in cheerful red. Boarders dine at long tables under gaudy chandeliers and afterward gather in front parlors with fern-trimmed windows, to discuss happenings of the day.

The Yiddish Art Theatre, criss-crossed with flamboyant posters, has a waiting line usually at dusk. Stage heroes and heroines are taken very seriously and most of the crowd is there for a peep at them. If one is sighted the cheering and applauding can be heard blocks waay. Old favorites are never forgotten.

There is a story of a woman of wealth going to a jaded straw blonde who had enamored her husband and asking her to clear out of the country in exchange for a $100,000 check.

"But he loves me," countered the blonde.

"Do you value his love at $100,000?"

There was a thoughtful silence and then a "Gimme the check, lady, you win." And that ended another Broadway love.

Love seems to curl up quickly in Manhattan. Recently a married couple gave an elaborate and sumptuous dinner at one of the smartest restaurants. Two mornings later the wife read of one of those "I will not be responsible for debts contracted by my wife" notices in the paper.

"What happened?" telephoned a friend.

"He met a new charmer at our party," was the laconic reply. "She's in—I'm out."

A genuine grand piano only 4 feet 6 inches long—for $650! This is a sensational value.

A reasonable initial payment will put the Gulbransen Small Grand in your home. Subsequent payments to suit your convenience.

Beauty You Stop To Look At

If there is anything in this world lovelier than a head of silken-like hair, pronounced in its own color, and wavy, it is an abundance of it.

It is just as easy to have hair like that as to have any at all. It is not always a gift of nature, that is true. But it IS always possible if you keep it clean by brushing it with a few dashes of Danderine. Shampooing alone can not remove the dandruff and that oily film which keeps it dull.

Make it a habit to use a little Danderine on your brush every time you fix your hair, and you will always have soft, lovely, beautiful locks. A million women are doing it, and as fast as those who are still struggling with coarse, dull, lifeless hair, learn about the marvelous things Danderine is doing, they can not keep back their enthusiasm.

Just one thing to be sure of. Use a stiff brush and draw it through the hair with long, even strokes clear to the scalp so each strand becomes alive and glowing. It will help to keep in your waves.

Danderine is so inexpensive, too. The 35c bottle contains enough to show you how wonderful it is. You can get it from your nearest store.

Grim Pyorrhea gets 4 out of 5

All around you are people doomed, through carelessness, to contract Pyorrhea. Four persons out of five past forty (and many younger) are its victims.

Carelessness—neglect of teeth and gums—is the cause. And the results, too often, are loss of teeth, neuritis, rheumatism, or other serious diseases.

And yet, if you start in time, it is so easy to prevent. See your dentist twice a year. And start using Forhan's for the Gums.

Used regularly and in time, Forhan's prevents Pyorrhea or checks it. It firms the gums and keeps them healthy. It protects teeth and keeps them white.

Ask your dentist about Forhan's, the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Liquid, used by dentists in the treatment of Pyorrhea.

Safeguard youth and health! Start the morning-and-night Forhan habit, today. Teach your children to use it as health-insurance. At all druggists', 35c and 60c.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER

"PRESIDENTIAL SPOKESMAN'S" GONE TO AN UNMARKED GRAVE

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The coroner ought to sit on the "presidential spokesman's" remarks.

He snuffed out too suddenly not to be suspicious.

If ever a case looked like picture-wire, smelled like chloroform and sounded like a sash weight it's the "presidential spokesman's."

HE was a most useful person, too. The press feels his loss keenly.

As all Washington correspondents know, the president himself mustn't be quoted.

He gives out news but the papers musn't say he said so.

It frequently happens that news isn't much good unless you tell where it comes from.

Suppose the country wants to hear what the president has to say about so-and-so? You ask him. He answers. How are you going to pass his answer on to a waiting world if you can't quote him?

Well, you can't. Or, if you do, it's his recognized privilege to elect you to his Ananias Club. You're "in bad" forever after also.

But you can quote the presidential spokesman."

That is, you always could, during several generations of presidents, until very lately. Not now, however.

AFTER many years' faithful service, there began to be indications, some time ago, that the "spokesman" was falling into disfavor at the White House.

For one thing, it was clear President Coolidge had a hunch the public no longer believed he had any "spokesman."

Then folks got to joshing about him, which made him ridiculous.

RIGHT on top of all these setbacks, the "presidential spokesman" committed the prize "faux pas" of his entire career.

In denying that Secretary of State Kellogg was about to resign, he made the perfectly awful mistake of adding that Secretary of Commerce Hoover wouldn't get Kellogg's job, even if Kellogg did quit.

There's the best reason in the world for believing, as the president hastily explained, that the "spokesman" simply meant Hoover was too valuable a secretary of commerce to be transferred to any other department.

Nevertheless, there was no escaping the fact that the "spokesman's" utterance was susceptible to a different interpretation.

IT certainly was so interpreted—that is to say, differently from the way the president says his "spokesman" meant it—in embarrassingly numerous quarters.

The row about it was very considerable. Hoover may have considered it all right, but a lot of his friends didn't.

Shortly afterward word was passed out from the termporary White House to the correspondents that the "presidential spokesman" is no more—he's dead, embalmed, buried and gone, it was strongly intimated the president hopes, to a warmer climate than even Washington in summer.

Henceforward quotations are TABOO—from almost anybody.

WITH a motive for foul play so strongly indicated, surely this is a case for investigation. And yet, what's the coroner to do about it?—without even a "corpus delicti."

Beauty You Stop To Look At

If there is anything in this world lovelier than a head of silken-like hair, pronounced in its own color, and wavy, it is an abundance of it.

It is just as easy to have hair like that as to have any at all. It is not always a gift of nature, that is true. But it IS always possible if you keep it clean by brushing it with a few dashes of Danderine. Shampooing alone can not remove the dandruff and that oily film which keeps it dull.

Make it a habit to use a little Danderine on your brush every time you fix your hair, and you will always have soft, lovely, beautiful locks. A million women are doing it, and as fast as those who are still struggling with coarse, dull, lifeless hair, learn about the marvelous things Danderine is doing, they can not keep back their enthusiasm.

Just one thing to be sure of. Use a stiff brush and draw it through the hair with long, even strokes clear to the scalp so each strand becomes alive and glowing. It will help to keep in your waves.

Danderine is so inexpensive, too. The 35c bottle contains enough to show you how wonderful it is. You can get it from your nearest store.

Recreation Advantages Make American Billiard Parlors Popular Center

Ten New Brunswick "Medalist" Brand Tables Provide Unsurpassable Facilities for Pool and Billiards; Four Bowling Alleys Always in First Class Condition.

Properly conducted there probably is no greater sport, contest or competition, in whatever light it may be regarded, that tends toward the development of a keener mentality, a steadier hand and eye, a cohesive functioning of all intellects, and operates, as well, to relieve problem laden minds of daily business cares, than the pastime of billiards. It is followed, in its various forms, from coast to coast, from gulf to border and internationally, as well.

Known the world over, where civilization is, it thrives in the metropolitan centers and it is a center of interest in every hamlet and village.

Besides promoting the sport itself through facilities that well may be ranked with the best in this section of the state, the American Billiard Parlors, East Sixth street, also fosters the accompanying spirit of sportsmanship, good fellowship, gentility and the environment that places the game on a plane equal to sports of other characters.

Its followers are legion and justly so. The clubs have their especial room for billiards, the private homes their own tables, but for those who cannot afford the luxury of individually owned accessories of the game, there are the American parlors.

Here they may play on 10 new Brunswick tables, installed as recently as last August. The layout consists of eight pool tables and two for the exclusive use of billiards.

The tables are known as the "Medalist" brand, the latest type of their kind constructed by Brunswick and this name on a green topped table is sufficient guarantee in itself of worthiness.

Like an automobile or a piece of machinery, the characteristics that denote quality serviceability or endurance are not always branded on the surface.

When you play on a "Medalist" you play over a heavy slate foundation on Belgian cloth, the best kind of cloth for the purpose to which it is adapted, and the most expensive.

You don't see the slate, the "backbone," but you know it's there. The results will tell.

And the tables are kept clean, always in excellent condition responding instantly and accurately to the most expert play. There are no "spots" no patches either. Three dozen new cues recently were placed in service as accessory equipment.

On the opposite side of the billiard parlors are located four bowling alleys; these too being always kept in perfect condition—clean, true and well illuminated at all times.

You're certain to get your strikes and spares whenever they're coming to you. It is not necessary to overcome the handicap of imperfect alleys.

The American has been in operation since 1915 when it was first opened by Ted Ganas. For a year it was conducted purely as a billiard parlor.

In 1916, Ganas combined forces with his brothers, Nick and Mike, and the bowling alleys were installed. The same high standard that was set at the beginning has been maintained unceasingly up to the present time.

As an incidental part of the business the Ganas brothers operate also a lunch counter and soda fountain, as well as cigar and tobacco stand.

Interested in baseball to the extent that he is financially backing a team known as the American Billiards in the City Industrial league, Ted Ganas also creates further interest in his establishment through the reception of major and minor league baseball scores, by the inning, over special telegraph apparatus.

All in all the American Billiard parlors deserve recognition as a recreational center of genuine merit.

Ten New Brunswick "Medalist" Brand Tables Provide Unsurpassable Facilities for Pool and Billiards; Four Bowling Alleys Always in First Class Condition.

Properly conducted there probably is no greater sport, contest or competition, in whatever light it may be regarded, that tends toward the development of a keener mentality, a steadier hand and eye, a cohesive functioning of all intellects, and operates, as well, to relieve problem laden minds of daily business cares, than the pastime of billiards. It is followed, in its various forms, from coast to coast, from gulf to border and internationally, as well.

Known the world over, where civilization is, it thrives in the metropolitan centers and it is a center of interest in every hamlet and village.

Besides promoting the sport itself through facilities that well may be ranked with the best in this section of the state, the American Billiard Parlors, East Sixth street, also fosters the accompanying spirit of sportsmanship, good fellowship, gentility and the environment that places the game on a plane equal to sports of other characters.

Its followers are legion and justly so. The clubs have their especial room for billiards, the private homes their own tables, but for those who cannot afford the luxury of individually owned accessories of the game, there are the American parlors.

Here they may play on 10 new Brunswick tables, installed as recently as last August. The layout consists of eight pool tables and two for the exclusive use of billiards.

The tables are known as the "Medalist" brand, the latest type of their kind constructed by Brunswick and this name on a green topped table is sufficient guarantee in itself of worthiness.

Like an automobile or a piece of machinery, the characteristics that denote quality serviceability or endurance are not always branded on the surface.

When you play on a "Medalist" you play over a heavy slate foundation on Belgian cloth, the best kind of cloth for the purpose to which it is adapted, and the most expensive.

You don't see the slate, the "backbone," but you know it's there. The results will tell.

And the tables are kept clean, always in excellent condition responding instantly and accurately to the most expert play. There are no "spots" no patches either. Three dozen new cues recently were placed in service as accessory equipment.

On the opposite side of the billiard parlors are located four bowling alleys; these too being always kept in perfect condition—clean, true and well illuminated at all times.

You're certain to get your strikes and spares whenever they're coming to you. It is not necessary to overcome the handicap of imperfect alleys.

The American has been in operation since 1915 when it was first opened by Ted Ganas. For a year it was conducted purely as a billiard parlor.

RED CROSS ANGEL ON JOB IN TORNADO-SWEPT STATES

ARMS OF MERCY UNIT EXTENDED TO STORM AREA

Steeled by Four-week Struggle in Flood Zone.

SUCCOR VICTIMS

Redouble Efforts to Curb Disaster Along Mississippi.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 11.—The sustaining arms of the American Red Cross, steeled by a four weeks' hand to hand struggle with the devastating Mississippi's floods, were extended today to the wind swept regions of five states spread from Illinois to Texas.

Under plans suggested by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and approved by Red Cross field officers, the two vast areas of death and suffering will be administered through a single relief organization. The existing food relief machinery will be expanded to care for the new hundreds awaiting succor from tornadoes in Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas and Texas.

While the new tornado relief machinery centered at Memphis was getting under way, flood rescue forces in west central Louisiana redoubled their efforts today to curb the disaster in the seven threatened parishes south of the Bayou Des Glaises levee, which is rapidly crumbling under the Arkansas overflow.

Warns of Impending Break.

The Bayou dikes have been water topped for 48 hours. Warnings that a break appeared inevitable have been posted throughout the threatened parishes for a week. Thousands of muscle-sore levee defenders are battling along the 50 miles of wave-washed wall in a last heroic stand against the inexorable sea still swelling over thousands of square miles in northeastern Louisiana. Walking in mud and seepage knee deep in spots, these desperate thousands labor like automatons 24 hours a day in their losing fight to build up the Bayou walls faster than the angry waters damage them.

Because of the stubborn refusal of thousands in the threatened area to heed the evacuation warnings, rescue equipment in the Red and Old rivers has been augmented against the anticipated crevasse in the bayou levees. Six huge barges were hauled up from New Orleans today under emergency orders to stand by with the armada of coast guard vessels, side-wheel packet ships, tankers, and tugs scattered along the two rivers.

Former Governor John M. Parker, in charge of the state relief machinery, believes everything possible has been done to prevent loss of life when the break comes, probably within 48 hours. But as to property loss he gazes intently, almost fiercely at the colored pins in the huge wall map and says earnestly "we're fighting wherever we can set foot. At some spots the leeves are too soft to sustain the men but we're fighting till the jig is up."

Five New Refugee Camp Sites.

Secretary Hoover, accompanied by James L. Feiser, vice chairman of the National Red Cross, arrived from New Orleans last night to confer here today with Parker and Adjutant General Toombs on details of the relief plans formulated against the moment when the jig shall be up. Five new refugee camp sites are ready.

Naval wireless communication is maintaining a constant vigil over the threatened levees. Army and navy planes soared above the fragile barrier which has checked the flood havoc for five days. A break at any point, a flash to relief headquarters in the statehouse here, and a single order will center the entire machinery for rescue into action.

Although the water levels have risen several inches over most of the northern Louisiana flooded area during the last 24 hours no new territory has been inundated north of the Bayou levee line.

The break in the protecting dike at Vidalia had the effect only of opening a new spillway from the Mississippi into an already flooded town. Vidalia, a village of 1500 people directly opposite Natchez, is the parish seat of Concordia parish, which has been virtually submerged since the opening of the main levee near Glasscock last week.

Meterologists placed the crest of the flood today in the vicinity of Natchez, creeping southward at the rate of 15 miles a day. Engineers reports predicted the crest would reach the mouth of the Old river not later than Friday.

Search for Storm Victims.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., May 11.—Military regulations ruled over the "tornado area," today as the well-organized armies of rescue workers methodically continued the task of searching for bodies in the ruins of Monday's twister.

The recovered dead totaled 79 today with the possibility several more victims would be found in the debris. The injured numbered more than 250 and about 10 of this number were so badly hurt they may die.

Mayor John W. Barcyman and other officials who have been directing rescue work agreed that the death toll would reach 100 or more.

Red Cross Flood Relief Fund Hits $10,120,783 Mark

WASHINGTON, May 11. — The Red Cross floor relief fund reached $10,120,783 today.

Officials said that additional money would be needed to care properly for Mississippi valley refugees, and the drive will be pressed vigorously.

State's Youngest Convicted Murderer Goes to Death Cell

COLUMBUS, O., May 11. — Ohio's state penitentiary had within its walls one of the state's youngest convicted murderers to be sent to the chair—Floyd Hewitt, 16-year-old Conneaut lad, convicted on April 26 of slaying Fred Brown, Jr., 5, Conneaut.

Hewitt arrived here late yesterday at Jefferson. He is sentenced to die afternoon from Ashtabula county jail in the electric chair Aug. 10.

800 MARINES GO TO NICARAGUA

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The first contingent of 800 additional marines ordered to Nicaragua for police duty sailed today from Quantico, Va., aboard the U. S. S. Aroostook. There were 130 in the party.

The Aroostook will pick up 45 marines at Hampton Roads and 100 at Charleston, S. C.

Counsel for Sacco And Vanzetti Makes Move for Clemency

BOSTON, May 11.—Attorney William G. Thompson, counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, convicted of slaying a paymaster and his guard, today called at the home of Governor Alvan Fuller. It was understood that Thompson was to discuss with the governor seven affidavits alleged that the trial before Judge Webster Thayer was prejudiced against Sacco and Vanzetti because they were radicals.

It was rumored that the governor was to announce whether he would let the death sentence stand or review it by a public commission. The governor's secretary, Herman Macdonald, stated, however, that no decision would be forthcoming today.

Buffalo Salesman Acquitted by Jury Of Girl's Death

ERIE, Pa., My 11.—Karl Bechtel, Buffalo salesman, was acquitted by a jury in Erie county today of murder charges in connection with the death of Virginia Gibney, Philadelphia chorus girl, who died in a hotel here in March.

The jury's verdict of "not guilty" was directed by Judge U. P. Rossiter, who said the district attorney had offered no evidence that would prove Bechtel caused the girl's death.

A coroner's jury had found the girl died from natural causes, but the district attorney ordered Bechtel held for trial when the latter admitted he choked Miss Gibney during a quarrel a few hours before her death.

Mrs. K. E. White Becomes Owner of McKinley Hotel

Mrs. K. E. White, former owner of the Diamond hotel, has obtained a lease on the building and purchased the equipment of the McKinley hotel, Second street, adjoining the Cleveland & Pittsburgh passenger station. The hostelry, which has 29 rooms, has been operated by R. H. Canaday. Mrs. White has closed the hotel in the Diamond.

GREGORY'S BAND AT PARK TONIGHT

Another large crowd attended last night's dance at Virginia Gardens, Rock Springs Park dance hall, at which Dan Gregory's Victor recording band furnished the music.

Gregory will fill two more engagements at the Chester resort tonight and again tomorrow night. This will probably be the last appearance of the orchestra here this season as contracts, which have been closed, will keep them engaged throughout the summer.

BAKERY FIRE COSTS $2,000

F. W. Miller Shop, Green Lane, Damaged by Blaze.

Fire, believed to have started from a leaking gas pipe, caused damage estimated at $2,000 to the F. W. Miller bakery, in Green Lane, at 2:15 o'clock this morning. The loss is said to have been covered by insurance.

The fire broke out in a dressing room, which adjoins a small compartment, used in "raising" the bread before it is placed in the ovens. Herman Peterson and Harold Peterson, brothers, and Ernest Carroll, bakers, lost their clothing which was kept in the room. Herman Peterson also lost $66 in money, which he had in his pockets while his brother lost $5 in money and a wrist watch. Carroll's loss in money, in addition to his clothes, was $15.

Firemen from the Central station used two lines of hose in extinguishing the blaze which had eaten its way through a sky light and into the roof directly above the ovens. The ovens were not damaged, but a $300 stock of bread, together with flour and other materials, was rendered a total loss.

The building is owned by Dr. W. N. Bailey.

Miller will re-open as soon as temporary repairs can be made to the roof of the establishment.

Nicaraguan Rebel Chief's Agent Asks Meet With Sheffield

MEXICO CITY, May 11.—Dr. Pedro Zepeda, Mexican representative of Juan Sacasa, leader of the Nicaraguan Liberals, today requested an interview with American Ambassador Sheffield to propose that the United States invite some Latin-American republic to share the responsibility of supervising the Nicaraguan general election next year.

(One of the proposals made by Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's representative in Nicaragua, was that the United States supervise the Nicaraguan election in 1928).

At the United States embassy no information was forthcoming as to whether Dr. Zepeda would be received.

James Thorn, 15, Missing; Police Join in Search

Police today were asked to search for James Thorn, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Thorn, of Gardendale, who has been missing from his home since Monday afternoon.

The boy, who is a pupil in the seventh grade at the Maplewood school, did not attend school Monday afternoon and failed to return home Monday evening.

Church Trustees Ask Court Order For Sale of Lot

Trustees of the First Methodist Protestant church today filed an action in the common pleas court, Lisbon, seeking permission to sell lot No. 3 in DeBee's addition, Trentvale street.

The property is known as the Trentvale mission, which the church erected many years ago. The mission is to be abandoned.

and might justify double jeopardy for bootleggers.

GERMAN monarchists and imperialists that would welcome back the Hohenzollerns had a parade with iron helmets, four sons of the ex-kaiser joining in the procession. Their chance of recovering the throne their father lost would be better if one or two of them had been killed, or at least wounded, when the fighting was on. The Hohenzollern miracle that made the former kaiser one man in Germany with half a dozen sons of fighting age, all coming out of the war without a scratch, can't be a very popular miracle.

DEATH ROLL

Robert Andrew Seeckman.

Robert Andrew, 14 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Seeckman, died last night in the home, West Eighth street.

Funeral services will be held in the home at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, in charge of Rev. F. A. Dean, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church. Burial will be made in Spring Grove cemetery.

Urge New Fire Station

must cover all portions of the city and thus leave the high value district unprotected for extended periods.

"Colpled with these conditions are the discontinuance of inspections by the firemen, the absence of drills, total lack of ladder service for rescue work, an unreliable pumping engine, deficient small equipment, the poor condition of nearly all of the hose, poor repair facilities and inadequate fire stations. The resultant of all these features is a condition bordering on almost no fire defense for the city; in some sense the false sense of security offered by maintaining a fire department of this character is a detriment as it delays the calling on citizens to volunteer their aid for a serious fire which in the ultimate analysis must be the main dependence for protection to the high value districts."

Building Code Suggested.

Other recommendations are:

That the emergency connection between the high and low service reservoirs be equipped with a suitable automatic regulating valve to allow the high service line to maintain pressures when the normal low service drops to 20 pounds.

That all water mains 10 inches and over in diameter be tested and those found with reduced carrying capacity be cleaned.

That all hose be tested at least once a year to 250 pounds pressure and if found defective, be taken out of service.

That a ladder truck and pumper be immediately placed in service at head quarters.

That a building code be enacted conforming to modern requirements for construction and fire prevention.

That a complete code of regulations governing the manufacture, sale, storage and transportation of explosives and inflammables be adopted by ordinance and the chief of the fire department be held solely responsible for its enforcement and the keeping of records.

Water Mains "Tuberculated."

That an ordinance be adopted requiring all electrical work to be in accordance with the national electrical code.

That automatic sprinkler equipments with outside Siamese hose connections and controlling valve near main in street, be required in all buildings which by reason of their size, construction or occupancy, singly or combined, might act as conflagration breeders.

In touching upon the city's water supply it is pointed out that many of the mains are "badly tuberculated" and that an excessive amount of small pipe has been used. Fire hydrants are widely spaced and many of them are too small. The number of fire hydrants in use on December 31, 1926, was 286. The total mileage of water main service is 50.69 miles, 38 per cent of which is four-inch pipe 24 per cent six-inch, 11 per cent eight inch, seven per cent 10-inch, 10 per cent 12-inch, three per cent 16-inch and four per cent 20-inch.

The report carries a complete description of the motor equipment used by the fire department. Speaking of the No. 1 station, located on St. Clair avenue and Broadway, the report says: It is "an exposed frame structure in very poor condition of repair and it is totally unfitted for fire department purposes." The down town and East End stations are in need of plaster, paint and repairs, it is declared.

Condition of Garages.

The fire alarm system is also reviewed in the report. Fire alarm boxes are well distributed in the mercantile section but poorly located in other sections. In case of serious conflagration outside help could be secured from Chester, Salem, Pittsburgh and Akron, the report says.

While the city has a building permit ordinance, the form is "general and indefinite." "No inspection is made of building construction exception upon complaint of any interested individual, in which case an inspection is made and, if necessary, the matter is referred to the proper municipal or state authority," the report adds.

The condition of garages was from fair to very poor, the investigators say. One is fireproof, another fireproof except for roof and the rest, in or near the mercantile district, are of brick joisted construction with concrete floors. Cellars and business houses as a rule were orderly and fairly clean. Alleys were free from accumulations and inflammable rubbish. The packing rooms of nearby potteries are in poor condition.

The fire district covers 21 acres, being irregular in shape, averaging two blocks wide by three blocks long and containing nine blocks and part blocks. Most of the potteries where fire hazards exist are protected with automatic sprinklers.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 11.—Financial interest was largely centered on the railroad stocks and the prospects for the Nickel Plate consolidation at the beginning of trading today.

The new $48,000,000 bond offering of the Chesapeake corporation, a holding corporation for the Van Sweringen accumulation of Chesapeake and Ohio stock, met with an enthusiastic reception, the bonds jumping 3 points to 97 in the first period of trading on the stock exchange. Nickel Plate stock sold up about 6 points as the result of the favorable interpretation of the progress of the hearing now being conducted in Washington relative to the consolidation of this road with Pere Marquette, Chesapeake and Ohio, Erie and subsidiary roads into the proposed new eastern trunk system.

A few of the motor and utility stocks spurted to moderately higher price levels at the start of the session, but met with considerable liquidation and short selling at the higher rangers. Hudson Motors carried its advance to 87 1-2, up 4 points, while Consolidated Gas sold in volume above 101. The steel stocks were firm, with "New" U. S. Steel common above 123. This will be the only form of stock quoted after May 31.

The renewal rate on call money was marked down fractionally to 4 1-4 per cent. Commodity markets were irregular, with cotton down about 10 points, New York wheat up half a cent and Chicago grain fractionally lower. Weather conditions in the agricultural districts were generally favorable.

Main Circus Here

A large audience witnessed the afternoon performance. The opening spectacle was a pageant of unexcelled beauty—a veritable fairyland. More than 400 people and 300 animals take part in this beautiful vision of the "land of make-believe." The prima donna has a wonderful voice and could be heard above the strains of the augmented concert band of 32 instruments. A fortune alone is invested in the wardrobe of this part of the two-hour performance.

Performance Moves Rapidly.

Under the skilled hands of the director the performance moves rapidly. The aerialists, gathered from all parts of the old and new world, caused many a spectator to hold their breath. The riders, in their beautiful costumes, glittering with spangles, were a revelation to the circus loving populace. The elephants danced and cavorted to the delight of the nappy audience. The gymnasts and acrobats, among whom many nations are represented, performed marvelous feats of strength and dexterity.

The dancers of the tight wire, the mid-air horizontal bar artists, the shapely girls on the swinging ladders and hanging by their teeth high up in the big tent—all held the audience enthralled by their feats of skill and daring.

And the clowns—bless 'em—what would the circus be without the clowns! At intervals, during the two-hour show they appear from all sections of the big tent without the slightest warning. Their burlesques are immense, their stunts are hilarious and their costumes are so grotesque that they would cause "Old Man Gloom," himself, to shake with laughter.

Performers Born To Arena.

Nearly all of the circus performers have been literally born to the arena. Some of them represent the third and fourth generations of famous circus families. The boys and girls are a modest, healthy, honest party of playmates whose parents find time each day to hear lessons and give advice in manners and morals.

The "mother" is one of the most interesting characters of the circus. Her life is devoted particularly to the welfare of the women performers. Her official duty is that of matron of the dressing rooms. She it is who supervises their wardrobe, mends sudden breaches in the tarlatan and bespangled skirts and cares for her charges in case of illness or accident.

A pretty and pleasant and picturesque part of the daily life under the "white tops" comes after the substantial meal at 5 o'clock, when for two hours there is rest for all save the hard-worked people of the side show, or annex. The women performers, busy with sewing or fancy work; the men talking over the events of the day; the children playing among themselves; the horses silently munching their hay in the horse tents, form a charming picture.

Suddenly the shrill shriek of a whistle, a scampering to dressing rooms, ushers and ticket takers in their places, and the evening audience pours into the big tents.

Tents Seat 5,000 People.

The Walter L. Main circus is a mighty achievement of clean amusement. Built upon a foundation of quality, honesty and cleanliness, it was organized in 1879, this making its 48th trans-continental tour. No enterprise, large or small, not builded upon a foundation could have survived almost a half a century.

The waterproof tents comfortably seat 5,000 people and another performance will be given at 8 o'clock this evening. The doors will open one hour earlier in order that all patrons will have a full hour in which to visit the large double menagerie or to listen to the concert by Prof. Griffin's Military Band.

Immediately after the evening performance the loading of the special train of two sections will begin and the circus will depart for the city where it will exhibit tomorrow.

SENATE PASSES MYERS BILL

Upper Branch Also Overrides Veto of Lewis Measure.

COLUMBUS, O., May 11.—Republican senators in caucus here today voted to recess until May 31 when sine die adjournment of the present legislature will be subject to approval by the house of representatives.

COLUMBUS, O., May 11. — By a vote of 20 to 9, the Ohio senate today concurred in the action of the house in passing the Myers bill increasing the state's excise tax on gross premiums of foreign insurance companies from 2½ to 3 per cent. The bill goes to the governor.

The senate today passed the Lewis budget bill over Gov. Vic Donahey's veto by a vote of 29 to 5. The bill, which goes to the house, authorizes the governor to order heads of state departments to keep expenditures within appropriations made by the state legislature.

The senate recessed shortly before noon and the Republican senators went into caucus at the request of Senator C. C. Bolton, Cleveland, Republican floor leader.

It was understood that the caucus was for the purpose of determining whether the legislature should adjourn sine die, or arrange for a recess, and, also, to decide what action, if any, should be taken relative to the governor's request for confirmation of his appointment of Attorney Chalmers Parker, Columbus, Republican, to a six-year term as a member of the state utilities commission, succeeding Frank E. Maullar, Republican, Chillicothe.

Some Republican senators, it was understood, urged that the legislature provide for an extended recess in order to prevent the governor from carrying out this threat to call the solons back in special session if they fail to pass the Chappelear-Herbert election reform bill, and to thwart any plans the governor might have to designate Parker as a "recess" appointee, if the legislators adjourned sine die.

House Republicans parficipated in an extended caucus this forenoon. It was reported that they were considering what act should be taken by the house on the question of concurring in the action of the senate in passing measures over the governor's veto.

JUDD GRAY ASKS TO SEE HIS FORMER SWEETHEART, RUTH SNYDER, BEFORE TRIP TO DEATH CHAIR

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., May 11—Henry Judd Gray wants to see his former sweetheart, Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder—"just once, to say good-bye."

He made this plea to prison guards who had told him of the collapse of Mrs. Snyder in her cell.

"I'm sorry she has taken the verdict so hard," said Gray. "I didn't tell my story on the stand to make her suffer. I simply told the truth, and I feel better. I don't see why I can't see her just once again."

Prison officials said today that Gray may be given a chance to see Mrs. Snyder after they are sentenced next Monday by Justice Townsend Scudder to death in the electric chair for the murder of Albert Snyder. This opportunity will come just before they are driven in separate automobiles to Sing Sing immediately after sentence is pronounced.

Mrs. Snyder Resting Better.

Mrs. Snyder, who had been in a semi-hysterical condition since her conviction, was resting better this morning and hope was expressed that she will soon regain the poise she maintained throughout her trial. A special guard has been assigned to watch her, however, to see that she does not try to commit suicide.

Physicians believe she is not now suffering from epilepsy but merely from a severe case of hysteria. They attributed her recurring attacks of hysteria to the reaction from the strain on her nerves during the trial.

Her chance of escaping the electric chair on a plea of insanity became more remote today as her condition improved. She will be carefully examined as to her mental condition next Tuesday after her arrival at the deathhouse in Sing Sing. Her recovery is expected to be constant from now on.

Gray, meanwhile, is fully reconciled to his fate. He talks amiably, even coolly, to his guards as he paces his five-by-nine cell in Queens county jail. He apparently is reveling in his approaching doom, clutching at it as a means of expiation of his crime.

He has received a letter of sympathy from his wife, Mrs. Isabelle Gray, who plans to visit him on Friday. She has not seen her husband since the Tuesday after the murder of Snyder, more than seven weeks ago.

Counsel for Mrs. Snyder said they would not base their appeal from the verdict on her illness. They said the appeal will be made chiefly on the ground that improper evidence was admitted against their client. Attorneys for Gray will appeal on the same ground.

ARMS OF MERCY UNIT EXTENDED TO STORM AREA

Steeled by Four-week Struggle in Flood Zone.

SUCCOR VICTIMS

Redouble Efforts to Curb Disaster Along Mississippi.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 11.—The sustaining arms of the American Red Cross, steeled by a four weeks' hand to hand struggle with the devastating Mississippi's floods, were extended today to the wind swept regions of five states spread from Illinois to Texas.

Under plans suggested by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and approved by Red Cross field officers, the two vast areas of death and suffering will be administered through a single relief organization. The existing food relief machinery will be expanded to care for the new hundreds awaiting succor from tornadoes in Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas and Texas.

While the new tornado relief machinery centered at Memphis was getting under way, flood rescue forces in west central Louisiana redoubled their efforts today to curb the disaster in the seven threatened parishes south of the Bayou Des Glaises levee, which is rapidly crumbling under the Arkansas overflow.

Warns of Impending Break.

The Bayou dikes have been water topped for 48 hours. Warnings that a break appeared inevitable have been posted throughout the threatened parishes for a week. Thousands of muscle-sore levee defenders are battling along the 50 miles of wave-washed wall in a last heroic stand against the inexorable sea still swelling over thousands of square miles in northeastern Louisiana. Walking in mud and seepage knee deep in spots, these desperate thousands labor like automatons 24 hours a day in their losing fight to build up the Bayou walls faster than the angry waters damage them.

Because of the stubborn refusal of thousands in the threatened area to heed the evacuation warnings, rescue equipment in the Red and Old rivers has been augmented against the anticipated crevasse in the bayou levees. Six huge barges were hauled up from New Orleans today under emergency orders to stand by with the armada of coast guard vessels, side-wheel packet ships, tankers, and tugs scattered along the two rivers.

Former Governor John M. Parker, in charge of the state relief machinery, believes everything possible has been done to prevent loss of life when the break comes, probably within 48 hours. But as to property loss he gazes intently, almost fiercely at the colored pins in the huge wall map and says earnestly "we're fighting wherever we can set foot. At some spots the leeves are too soft to sustain the men but we're fighting till the jig is up."

Five New Refugee Camp Sites

Secretary Hoover, accompanied by James L. Feiser, vice chairman of the National Red Cross, arrived from New Orleans last night to confer here today with Parker and Adjutant General Toombs on details of the relief plans formulated against the moment when the jig shall be up. Five new refugee camp sites are ready.

Naval wireless communication is maintaining a constant vigil over the threatened levees. Army and navy planes soared above the fragile barrier which has checked the flood havoc for five days. A break at any point, a flash to relief headquarters in the statehouse here, and a single order will center the entire machinery for rescue into action.

Although the water levels have risen several inches over most of the northern Louisiana flooded area during the last 24 hours no new territory has been inundated north of the Bayou levee line.

The break in the protecting dike at Vidalia had the effect only of opening a new spillway from the Mississippi into an already flooded town. Vidalia, a village of 1500 people directly opposite Natchez, is the parish seat of Concordia parish, which has been virtually submerged since the opening of the main levee near Glasscock last week.

Meterologists placed the crest of the flood today in the vicinity of Natchez, creeping southward at the rate of 15 miles a day. Engineers reports predicted the crest would reach the mouth of the Old river not later than Friday.

Search for Storm Victims.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., May 11.—Military regulations ruled over the "tornado area," today as the well-organized armies of rescue workers methodically continued the task of searching for bodies in the ruins of Monday's twister.

The recovered dead totaled 79 today with the possibility several more victims would be found in the debris. The injured numbered more than 250 and about 10 of this number were so badly hurt they may die.

Mayor John W. Barcyman and other officials who have been directing rescue work agreed that the death toll would reach 100 or more.

WASHINGTON, May 11. — The Red Cross floor relief fund reached $10,120,783 today.

Officials said that additional money would be needed to care properly for Mississippi valley refugees, and the drive will be pressed vigorously.

State's Youngest Convicted Murderer Goes to Death Cell

COLUMBUS, O., May 11. — Ohio's state penitentiary had within its walls one of the state's youngest convicted murderers to be sent to the chair—Floyd Hewitt, 16-year-old Conneaut lad, convicted on April 26 of slaying Fred Brown, Jr., 5, Conneaut.

Hewitt arrived here late yesterday at Jefferson. He is sentenced to die afternoon from Ashtabula county jail in the electric chair Aug. 10.

800 MARINES GO TO NICARAGUA

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The first contingent of 800 additional marines ordered to Nicaragua for police duty sailed today from Quantico, Va., aboard the U. S. S. Aroostook. There were 130 in the party.

The Aroostook will pick up 45 marines at Hampton Roads and 100 at Charleston, S. C.

Counsel for Sacco And Vanzetti Makes Move for Clemency

BOSTON, May 11.—Attorney William G. Thompson, counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, convicted of slaying a paymaster and his guard, today called at the home of Governor Alvan Fuller. It was understood that Thompson was to discuss with the governor seven affidavits alleged that the trial before Judge Webster Thayer was prejudiced against Sacco and Vanzetti because they were radicals.

It was rumored that the governor was to announce whether he would let the death sentence stand or review it by a public commission. The governor's secretary, Herman Macdonald, stated, however, that no decision would be forthcoming today.

Buffalo Salesman Acquitted by Jury Of Girl's Death

ERIE, Pa., My 11.—Karl Bechtel, Buffalo salesman, was acquitted by a jury in Erie county today of murder charges in connection with the death of Virginia Gibney, Philadelphia chorus girl, who died in a hotel here in March.

The jury's verdict of "not guilty" was directed by Judge U. P. Rossiter, who said the district attorney had offered no evidence that would prove Bechtel caused the girl's death.

A coroner's jury had found the girl died from natural causes, but the district attorney ordered Bechtel held for trial when the latter admitted he choked Miss Gibney during a quarrel a few hours before her death.

BAKERY FIRE COSTS $2,000

F. W. Miller Shop, Green Lane, Damaged by Blaze.

Fire, believed to have started from a leaking gas pipe, caused damage estimated at $2,000 to the F. W. Miller bakery, in Green Lane, at 2:15 o'clock this morning. The loss is said to have been covered by insurance.

The fire broke out in a dressing room, which adjoins a small compartment, used in "raising" the bread before it is placed in the ovens. Herman Peterson and Harold Peterson, brothers, and Ernest Carroll, bakers, lost their clothing which was kept in the room. Herman Peterson also lost $66 in money, which he had in his pockets while his brother lost $5 in money and a wrist watch. Carroll's loss in money, in addition to his clothes, was $15.

Firemen from the Central station used two lines of hose in extinguishing the blaze which had eaten its way through a sky light and into the roof directly above the ovens. The ovens were not damaged, but a $360 stock of bread, together with flour and other materials, was rendered a total loss.

The building is owned by Dr. W. N. Bailey.

Miller will re-open as soon as temporary repairs can be made to the roof of the establishment.

Nicaraguan Rebel Chief's Agent Asks Meet With Sheffield

(One of the proposals made by Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's representative in Nicaragua, was that the United States supervise the Nicaraguan election in 1928).

At the United States embassy no information was forthcoming as to whether Dr. Zepeda would be received.

TODAY

and might justify double jeopardy for bootleggers.

GERMAN monarchists and imperialists that would welcome back the Hohenzollerns had a parade with iron helmets, four sons of the ex-kaiser joining in the procession. Their chance of recovering the throne their father lost would be better if one or two of them had been killed, or at least wounded, when the fighting was on. The Hohenzollern miracle that made the former kaiser one man in Germany with half a dozen sons of fighting age, all coming out of the war without a scratch, can't be a very popular miracle.

DEATH ROLL

Robert Andrew, 14 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Seeckman, died last night in the home, West Eighth street.

Funeral services will be held in the home at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, in charge of Rev. F. A. Dean, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church. Burial will be made in Spring Grove cemetery.

must cover all portions of the city and thus leave the high value district unprotected for extended periods.

"Colpled with these conditions are the discontinuance of inspections by the firemen, the absence of drills, total lack of ladder service for rescue work, an unreliable pumping engine, deficient small equipment, the poor condition of nearly all of the hose, poor repair facilities and inadequate fire stations. The resultant of all these features is a condition bordering on almost no fire defense for the city; in some sense the false sense of security offered by maintaining a fire department of this character is a detriment as it delays the calling on citizens to volunteer their aid for a serious fire which in the ultimate analysis must be the main dependence for protection to the high value districts."

Building Code Suggested.

Other recommendations are:

That the emergency connection between the high and low service reservoirs be equipped with a suitable automatic regulating valve to allow the high service line to maintain pressures when the normal low service drops to 20 pounds.

That all water mains 10 inches and over in diameter be tested and those found with reduced carrying capacity be cleaned.

That all hose be tested at least once a year to 250 pounds pressure and if found defective, be taken out of service.

That a ladder truck and pumper be immediately placed in service at headquarters.

That a building code be enacted conforming to modern requirements for construction and fire prevention.

That a complete code of regulations governing the manufacture, sale, storage and transportation of explosives and inflammables be adopted by ordinance and the chief of the fire department be held solely responsible for its enforcement and the keeping of records.

Water Mains "Tuberculated."

That an ordinance be adopted requiring all electrical work to be in accordance with the national electrical code.

That automatic sprinkler equipments with outside Siamese hose connections and controlling valve near main in street, be required in all buildings which by reason of their size, construction or occupancy, singly or combined, might act as conflagration breeders.

In touching upon the city's water supply it is pointed out that many of the mains are "badly tuberculated" and that an excessive amount of small pipe has been used. Fire hydrants are widely spaced and many of them are too small. The number of fire hydrants in use on December 31, 1926, was 286. The total mileage of water main service is 50.69 miles, 38 per cent of which is four-inch pipe, 24 per cent six-inch, 11 per cent eight inch, seven per cent 10-inch, 10 per cent 12-inch, three per cent 16-inch and four per cent 20-inch.

The report carries a complete description of the motor equipment used by the fire department. Speaking of the No. 1 station, located on St. Clair avenue and Broadway, the report says: It is "an exposed frame structure in very poor condition of repair and it is totally unfitted for fire department purposes." The down town and East End stations are in need of plaster, paint and repairs, it is declared.

Condition of Garages.

The fire alarm system is also reviewed in the report. Fire alarm boxes are well distributed in the mercantile section but poorly located in other sections. In case of serious conflagration outside help could be secured from Chester, Salem, Pittsburgh and Akron, the report says.

While the city has a building permit ordinance, the form is "general and indefinite." "No inspection is made of building construction exception upon complaint of any interested individual, in which case an inspection is made and, if necessary, the matter is referred to the proper municipal or state authority," the report adds.

The condition of garages was from fair to very poor, the investigators say. One is fireproof, another fireproof except for roof and the rest, in or near the mercantile district, are of brick joisted construction with concrete floors. Cellars and business houses as a rule were orderly and fairly clean. Alleys were free from accumulations and inflammable rubbish. The packing rooms of nearby potteries are in poor condition.

The fire district covers 21 acres, being irregular in shape, averaging two blocks wide by three blocks long and containing nine blocks and part blocks. Most of the potteries where fire hazards exist are protected with automatic sprinklers.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 11.—Financial interest was largely centered on the railroad stocks and the prospects for the Nickel Plate consolidation at the beginning of trading today.

The new $48,000,000 bond offering of the Chesapeake corporation, a holding corporation for the Van Sweringen accumulation of Chesapeake and Ohio stock, met with an enthusiastic reception, the bonds jumping 3 points to 97 in the first period of trading on the stock exchange. Nickel Plate stock sold up about 6 points as the result of the favorable interpretation of the progress of the hearing now being conducted in Washington relative to the consolidation of this road with Pere Marquette, Chesapeake and Ohio, Erie and subsidiary roads into the proposed new eastern trunk system.

A few of the motor and utility stocks spurted to moderately higher price levels at the start of the session, but met with considerable liquidation and short selling at the higher rangers. Hudson Motors carried its advance to 87 1-2, up 4 points, while Consolidated Gas sold in volume above 101. The steel stocks were firm, with "New" U. S. Steel common above 123. This will be the only form of stock quoted after May 31.

The renewal rate on call money was marked down fractionally to 4 1-4 per cent. Commodity markets were irregular, with cotton down about 10 points, New York wheat up half a cent and Chicago grain fractionally lower. Weather conditions in the agricultural districts were generally favorable.

Main Circus Here

A large audience witnessed the afternoon performance. The opening spectacle was a pageant of unexcelled beauty—a veritable fairyland. More than 400 people and 300 animals take part in this beautiful vision of the "land of make-believe." The prima donna has a wonderful voice and could be heard above the strains of the augmented concert band of 32 instruments. A fortune alone is invested in the wardrobe of this part of the two-hour performance.

Performance Moves Rapidly.

Under the skilled hands of the director the performance moves rapidly. The aerialists, gathered from all parts of the old and new world, caused many a spectator to hold their breath. The riders, in their beautiful costumes, glittering with spangles, were a revelation to the circus loving populace. The elephants danced and cavorted to the delight of the nappy audience. The gymnasts and acrobats, among whom many nations are represented, performed marvelous feats of strength and dexterity.

The dancers of the tight wire, the mid-air horizontal bar artists, the shapely girls on the swinging ladders and hanging by their teeth high up in the big tent—all held the audience enthralled by their feats of skill and daring.

And the clowns—bless 'em—what would the circus be without the clowns! At intervals, during the two-hour show they appear from all sections of the big tent without the slightest warning. Their burlesques are immense, their stunts are hilarious and their costumes are so grotesque that they would cause "Old Man Gloom," himself, to shake with laughter.

Performers Born To Arena.

Nearly all of the circus performers have been literally born to the arena. Some of them represent the third and fourth generations of famous circus families. The boys and girls are a modest, healthy, honest party of playmates whose parents find time each day to hear lessons and give advice in manners and morals.

The "mother" is one of the most interesting characters of the circus. Her life is devoted particularly to the welfare of the women performers. Her official duty is that of matron of the dressing rooms. She it is who supervises their wardrobe, mends sudden breaches in the tarlatan and bespangled skirts and cares for her charges in case of illness or accident.

A pretty and pleasant and picturesque part of the daily life under the "white tops" comes after the substantial meal at 5 o'clock, when for two hours there is rest for all save the hard-worked people of the side show, or annex. The women performers, busy with sewing or fancy work; the men talking over the events of the day; the children playing among themselves; the horses silently munching their hay in the horse tents, form a charming picture.

Suddenly the shrill shriek of a whistle, a scampering to dressing rooms, ushers and ticket takers in their places, and the evening audience pours into the big tents.

Tents Seat 5,000 People.

The Walter L. Main circus is a mighty achievement of clean amusement. Built upon a foundation of quality, honesty and cleanliness, it was organized in 1879, this making its 48th trans-continental tour. No enterprise, large or small, not builded upon a foundation could have survived almost a half a century.

The waterproof tents comfortably seat 5,000 people and another performance will be given at 8 o'clock this evening. The doors will open one hour earlier in order that all patrons will have a full hour in which to visit the large double menagerie or to listen to the concert by Prof. Griffin's Military Band.

Immediately after the evening performance the loading of the special train of two sections will begin and the circus will depart for the city where it will exhibit tomorrow.

SENATE PASSES MYERS BILL

Upper Branch Also Overrides Veto of Lewis Measure.

COLUMBUS, O., May 11.—Republican senators in caucus here today voted to recess until May 31 when sine die adjournment of the present legislature will be subject to approval by the house of representatives.

COLUMBUS, O., May 11. — By a vote of 20 to 9, the Ohio senate today concurred in the action of the house in passing the Myers bill increasing the state's excise tax on gross premiums of foreign insurance companies from 2½ to 3 per cent. The bill goes to the governor.

The senate today passed the Lewis budget bill over Gov. Vic Donahey's veto by a vote of 29 to 5. The bill, which goes to the house, authorizes the governor to order heads of state departments to keep expenditures within appropriations made by the state legislature.

The senate recessed shortly before noon and the Republican senators went into caucus at the request of Senator C. C. Bolton, Cleveland, Republican floor leader.

It was understood that the caucus was for the purpose of determining whether the legislature should adjourn sine die, or arrange for a recess, and, also, to decide what action, if any, should be taken relative to the governor's request for confirmation of his appointment of Attorney Chalmers Parker, Columbus, Republican, to a six-year term as a member of the state utilities commission, succeeding Frank E. Maullar, Republican, Chillicothe.

Some Republican senators, it was understood, urged that the legislature provide for an extended recess in order to prevent the governor from carrying out this threat to call the solons back in special session if they fail to pass the Chappelear-Herbert election reform bill, and to thwart any plans the governor might have to designate Parker as a "recess" appointee, if the legislators adjourned sine die.

House Republicans participated in an extended caucus this forenoon. It was reported that they were considering what act should be taken by the house on the question of concurring in the action of the senate in passing measures over the governor's veto.

This day brings sad memories of a loved one gone to rest,
May Jesus bless him in his loving way,

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., May 11—Henry Judd Gray wants to see his former sweetheart, Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder—"just once, to say good-bye."

He made this plea to prison guards who had told him of the collapse of Mrs. Snyder in her cell.

"I'm sorry she has taken the verdict so hard," said Gray. "I didn't tell my story on the stand to make her suffer. I simply told the truth, and I feel better. I don't see why I can't see her just once again."

Prison officials said today that Gray may be given a chance to see Mrs. Snyder after they are sentenced next Monday by Justice Townsend Scudder to death in the electric chair for the murder of Albert Snyder. This opportunity will come just before they are driven in separate automobiles to Sing Sing immediately after sentence is pronounced.

Mrs. Snyder Resting Better.

Mrs. Snyder, who had been in a semi-hysterical condition since her conviction, was resting better this morning and hope was expressed that she will soon regain the poise she maintained throughout her trial. A special guard has been assigned to watch her, however, to see that she does not try to commit suicide.

Physicians believe she is not now suffering from epilepsy but merely from a severe case of hysteria. They attributed her recurring attacks of hysteria to the reaction from the strain on her nerves during the trial.

Her chance of escaping the electric chair on a plea of insanity became more remote today as her condition improved. She will be carefully examined as to her mental condition next Tuesday after her arrival at the deathhouse in Sing Sing. Her recovery is expected to be constant from now on.

Gray, meanwhile, is fully reconciled to his fate. He talks amiably, even volubly, to his guards as he paces his five-by-nine cell in Queens county jail. He apparently is reveling in his approaching doom, clutching at it as a means of expiation of his crime.

He has received a letter of sympathy from his wife, Mrs. Isabelle Gray, who plans to visit him on Friday. She has not seen her husband since the Tuesday after the murder of Snyder, more than seven weeks ago.

Counsel for Mrs. Snyder said they would not base their appeal from the verdict on her illness. They said the appeal will be made chiefly on the ground that improper evidence was admitted against their client. Attorneys for Gray will appeal on the same ground.

South of the Atlas

BY MARSHALL P. HALL
AUTHOR OF "THE VALLEY OF STRIFE" AND "RIDDLE OF THE CIRCLE"

SYNOPSIS:

LARRY GRENFALL, American, traveler and student of Eastern occultism receives a telephone call from BEN MANSOUR, cosmopolite and old friend, saying he must see him immediately.

GILES, Mansour's servant, drives him to his old friend's house. He seems afraid of an attack and arms Grenfall with a revolver. The curtains are drawn back and two turbanned heads are seen. Giles fires at them. The car comes to a halt, the turbanned figures get away, Larry starts the car and they arrive at Mansour's house.

While the two friends talk they see a face appear at the window which Mansour throws open and a Moor steps into the room. As a token he hands Mansour a ring set with a huge ruby. Mansour accepts it and throws it carelessly on the table.

CHAPTER THREE.

"I am commanded by the Group to speak to you, moulay, offering you the choice of resuming your sheriffdom, joining Moulay Edrisss by your own hand, or joining him—" He paused, significantly, the while his beady, black eyes blazed into those of Mansour.

"And if I choose to appoint another to honor my throne?" Mansour's voice was calm despite the fact that he had just heard a sinister death threat. Larry interpreted the invitation to join Moulay Edriss in the only way it could be construed — Moulay Edriss had been dead these many decades, and to join him could mean only that one must die.

"Ai, my lord," the other made response. "There is no other who may take your place, save only he whom the Group may select after you." He paused again, leaving the sinister thought unuttered.

"Now, by the beard of the Prophet," Mansour roraed, his eyes flashing, his lean form straightening. "Am I a jackal of the hills, scouring for the filth of the tribal camps, that I must endure insolence from you, dog? Son of all that is vile, offspring of a thousand swine, go back to the Group, go back to the Temple, go back to the Atlas and take this word: The next sherif of the Seven Tribes will be my son. Go!"

Larry started violently. Ben Mansour with a son? Before he could pursue his thoughts further, he heard the Moor again:

"Moulay must know that the answer will not satisfy; that in carrying it back I am not performing fully the mission I came here on. There is still in hand the business of—"

"Killing me," interrupted Mansour, impatiently. "Well, begone, for I have anticipated you and three hours ago I swallowed karas. Is that sufficient for you?"

The other immediately made a low obsequy.

"You swear that you swallowed—?"

"I have told you," granted Mansour, and he pointed toward the window.

Larry, watching, in that instant sensed that Mansour was a Moor! And unless the signs were awry, he was high in the councils of his country. He had often suspected the man's nationality, but nothing Mansour had ever said or done had verified the suspicion; rather he had always intimated that he was what Larry first had taken him to be on the occasion of their initial meeitng, in the French Club at Fez—a well-to-do Englishman, touring for pleasure.

Dully, he watched the man of the turban step through the window, saw him turn and toss something inside, where it struck the floor with a cound like a hailstone striking a dry leaf. Mansour closed the window and picked up the thing the messenger had thrown back. Carelessly, he tossed it to Larry and the latter, catching it, turned it curiously in his fingers.

It was a tiny ivory replica of a tiger, its claws distended and its body crouched ominously!

"What is it, Ben?" asked Larry, a feeling on him that he was wandering through the vague shadows of a dream.

"An image of the Striped Death," the other answered. He was looking at Larry with tired eyes, a lazy smile on his face.

"You heard, Larry?"

Grenfall nodded.

"I'm damned if this isn't first rate stuff for a comic opera, Ben. The only thing lacking was that you did not draw an automatic and either kill that Moor, or chase him for dear life out into the storm. Old man, if I didn't know better, I'd swear I was in Morocco this blessed minute, somewhere high in the Berber hills of the Atlas. Tell me before I perish with curiosity, what, in the name of Allah, does it all mean?"

Mansour looked at the tiny clock.

"Time has flown," he said gently, his voice soft and mellow again. "It is nearly one-thirty. Well, I have slightly more than a half hour in which to talk, but before I explain, I to ask you a question: Will you do something for me that may endanger your very life?"

Despite the incongruity of the thing—for that matter fo this whole baushee night—Larry replied, instantly:

"Need you ask, my friend?"

Mansour's strong lean hand dropped over the bronzed muscular fingers of Larry and there was something in his touch that hinted somehow of renunciation and the great love of one man for another.

"Will you go to Morocco for me, Larry? Will you go into the Atlas, find the Temple, endure the Ordeal if need be and crush the Group? Will you recover at all costs a casket that is hidden in the Temple and give it to a man I shall name?"

Larry gazed anxiously into his friend's face, endeavoring to read what was in it.

"I am not mad, dear friend; I never was saner, never more serious than I am at this moment."

"I don't understand a thing you have said, Ben Mansour, but if it will help you or ease your mind, I promise that I shall do all I can to carry out any wishes you may have. But, tell me, why?"

"Because," Mansour's voice was low and husky, "unless Omar ben Medjad has in his possession the casket on the eve of the mouloud, a most wonderful boy will lose his birthright."

Larry pondered. The mouloud, he knew, was the anniversary of the birth of the Prophet, but for the life of him he could not understand Mansour—neither his mood nor what he was hinting at.

"Who is Omar Medjad, and where shall I find him?" he asked.

"He is a shop keeper in a side street that leads from the market place in Ab Dukkar. You will go to Ab Dukkar first and you will find in the street a Doukala mendicant, crying for alms. Ask him the way to Omar's and trust him, for he will be faithful."

"But where is this Temple?" Larry queried, desperately. "What is the Ordeal and what is in the casket? Oh, damn it, man, can't you see what a superlative mystery you are tonight, and what a superlative riddle your words are? At least, tell me if your son is the 'most wonderful boy' you have just—" he broke off, staring at Mansour, over whose face a great change had come on the instant. His eyes were growing heavy and dull and a pallor was spreading across his dark, handsome face. With an effort, he roused himself, briefly, and smiled wanly, lazily it seemed, at Larry.

"Too late—can't talk more—going—open chest—remember mendicant—Omar—boy—Temple—I'm sleep —

Larry caught his friend, in time to save him from pitching forward into the fire. Gently he laid him back on the divan and grasped the untasted brandy peg Mansour had left. But already the man's teeth were clenched and his staring eyes glazed. He was breathing so faintly that his chest movements were not visible. Larry glanced instnictively at the clock. It was two minutes until two!

Raising his voice, he summoned Giles, who appeared almost on the instant fully clothed, as though he had like a faithful watch-dog, been sleeping just beyond the door, on guard. One glance at Mansour, and Giles wailed.

"That's what 'e meant, sir, when 'e said I was to take my orders from you this mornin'. My Lor', sir, they've poisoned 'im. 'E told me once this might 'appen anytime and that if it did I was not to worry, but was to hopen 'is trunk the very minute I was sure 'e was gone. 'E said there was letters there I must take care of."

The clock chimed twice, mellow, musically. Larry, sensing it was exactly two, felt his friend's forehead and found it cold. His hand fumbled across Ben Mansour's chest, but could detect no heartbeat. He turned to Giles.

"Oepn the trunk and fetch the letters, then, Giles. Our friend, the man we both loved, is dead."

He dropped on his knees beside the body, his eyes filmed with unshed tears, and a short Berber prayer flitted through his mind. Kneeling thus, he uttered it above his dead friend:

"Merahba bi Koum."

Then in English:

"Heaven be with you."

two pieces and then the screws are tightened by the application of power. The machine is capable of applying the equivalent of 2,300,000 pounds pressure. The investigators watch the experiment and determine with instruments of percision at what point the beam buckles and loses its rigidity.

Many Different Mills.

The Bureau of Standards also has a textile mill for the making of yarns, a paper mill, a cement mill, an elaborate clay products factory which can produce anything from rough brick to the finest porcelain, manufactories for chemicals, for sugar, and for rubber goods, and a tannery. Every process of manufacture is carefully studied by the experts in charge and reports are prepared on the results. When some new sort of material or some new process of manufacture is developed, the research associates go to some commercial manufacturer and make arrangements to try out the new wrinkle in an actual factory. This is to determine whether or not the process of material can be made commercially to advantage.

Then, too, the Bureau has what are called its technical shops. These include a glass blowing shop, one for grinding optical lenses, one for the testing of time pieces, and, of course, an extensive electrical shop where experts constantly study this mysterious force.

The Bureau has a library of 28,000 volumes. They are all of a highly technical nature and to the average reader would doubtless prove rather dull and abstruse, but the scientist can find the most authoritative reference books which have been printed here or in other countries on every scientific subject. In addition to its own library, the Bureau can provide for the use of the research associates any book in the collection of three million in the Library of Congress. The 250,000 volumes in the Public Library of Washington also are available.

The practical use of the public of this research work can be guessed from such facts as that $15,000,000 a year has ben saved from brake lining investigations, $40,000,000 a year from study of the lasting qualities of rubber tires and no less than $100,000,000 a year from research into motor fuels.

The Bureau now is working on a new kind of sugar. It is called levulose and is declared to have a much higher content of sweet than any other type of sugar. It is made by a process discovered by the Bureau from the artichoke and the dahlia.

The Bureau's staff not infrequently is interfered with by the demands of pricate industry. Experts developed in the Bureau often are offered positions paying several times the relatively meagre salaries the government allows. Two states, Alabama and Virginia, have bespoken the cooperation of the Bureau in instructing newly appointed superintendents of weights and measures in the technical intricacies of their duties.

Thousands of people are miserable every Spring. They think they have "Spring fever," and many of them have come to believe they must go through just so much misery every Spring.

Now what ail people like this is that their blood is full of poison, which in turn has come from the colds, confinements and rich foods of winter. Their food doesn't taste good, and they haven't any energy.

Cheer up, old friend! What you need is a good medicine that will do three things: First, clear out your system, helping nature to get rid of all waste. Second, purify your blood and help nature enrich it. Third, correct the catarrhal condition before it gets serious.

Larry started violently. Ben Mansour with a son? Before he could pursue his thoughts further, he heard the Moor again:

"Moulay must know that the answer will not satisfy; that in carrying it back I am not performing fully the mission I came here on. There is still in hand the business of—"

"Killing me," interrupted Mansour, impatiently. "Well, begone, for I have anticipated you and three hours ago I swallowed karas. Is that sufficient for you?"

The other immediately made a low obsequy.

"You swear that you swallowed—?"

"I have told you," granted Mansour, and he pointed toward the window.

Larry, watching, in that instant sensed that Mansour was a Moor! And unless the signs were awry, he was high in the councils of his country. He had often suspected the man's nationality, but nothing Mansour had ever said or done had verified the suspicion; rather he had always intimated that he was what Larry first had taken him to be on the occasion of their initial meeitng, in the French Club, at Fez—a well-to-do Englishman, touring for pleasure.

Dully, he watched the man of the turban step through the window, saw him turn and toss something inside, where it struck the floor with a cound like a hailstone striking a dry leaf. Mansour closed the window and picked up the thing the messenger had thrown back. Carelessly, he tossed it to Larry and the latter, catching it, turned it curiously in his fingers.

It was a tiny ivory replica of a tiger, its claws distended and its body crouched ominously!

"What is it, Ben?" asked Larry, a feeling on him that he was wandering through the vague shadows of a dream.

"An image of the Striped Death," the other answered. He was looking at Larry with tired eyes, a lazy smile on his face.

"You heard, Larry?"

Grenfall nodded.

"I'm damned if this isn't first rate stuff for a comic opera, Ben. The only thing lacking was that you did not draw an automatic and either kill that Moor, or chase him for dear life out into the storm. Old man, if I didn't know better, I'd swear I was in Morocco this blessed minute, somewhere high in the Berber hills of the Atlas. Tell me before I perish with curiosity, what, in the name of Allah, does it all mean?"

Mansour looked at the tiny clock.

"Time has flown," he said gently, his voice soft and mellow again. "It is nearly one-thirty. Well, I have slightly more than a half hour in which to talk, but before I explain, I to ask you a question: Will you do something for me that may endanger your very life?"

Despite the incongruity of the thing—for that matter fo this whole baushee night—Larry replied, instantly:

"Need you ask, my friend?"

Mansour's strong lean hand dropped over the bronzed muscular fingers of Larry and there was something in his touch that hinted somehow of renunciation and the great love of one man for another.

"Will you go to Morocco for me, Larry? Will you go into the Atlas, find the Temple, endure the Ordeal if need be and crush the Group? Will you recover at all costs a casket that is hidden in the Temple and give it to a man I shall name?"

Larry gazed anxiously into his friend's face, endeavoring to read what was in it.

"I am not mad, dear friend; I never was saner, never more serious than I am at this moment."

"I don't understand a thing you have said, Ben Mansour, but if it will help you or ease your mind, I promise that I shall do all I can to carry out any wishes you may have. But, tell me, why?"

"Because," Mansour's voice was low and husky, "unless Omar ben Medjad has in his possession the casket on the eve of the mouloud, a most wonderful boy will lose his birthright."

Larry pondered. The mouloud, he knew, was the anniversary of the birth of the Prophet, but for the life of him he could not understand Mansour—neither his mood nor what he was hinting at.

"Who is Omar Medjad, and where shall I find him?" he asked.

"He is a shop keeper in a side street that leads from the market place in Ab Dukkar. You will go to Ab Dukkar first and you will find in the street a Doukala mendicant, crying for alms. Ask him the way to Omar's and trust him, for he will be faithful."

"But where is this Temple?" Larry queried, desperately. "What is the Ordeal and what is in the casket? Oh, damn it, man, can't you see what a superlative mystery you are tonight, and what a superlative riddle your words are? At least, tell me if your son is the 'most wonderful boy' you have just—" he broke off, staring at Mansour, over whose face a great change had come on the instant. His eyes were growing heavy and dull and a pallor was spreading across his dark, handsome face. With an effort, he roused himself, briefly, and smiled wanly, lazily it seemed, at Larry.

"Too late—can't talk more—going—open chest—remember mendicant—Omar—boy—Temple—I'm sleep —"

Larry caught his friend, in time to save him from pitching forward into the fire. Gently he laid him back on the divan and grasped the untasted brandy peg Mansour had left. But already the man's teeth were clenched and his staring eyes glazed. He was breathing so faintly that his chest movements were not visible. Larry glanced instnictively at the clock. It was two minutes until two!

Raising his voice, he summoned Giles, who appeared almost on the instant fully clothed, as though he had like a faithful watch-dog, been sleeping just beyond the door, on guard. One glance at Mansour, and Giles wailed.

"That's what 'e meant, sir, when 'e said I was to take my orders from you this mornin'. My Lor', sir, they've poisoned 'im. 'E told me once this might 'appen anytime and that if it did I was not to worry, but was to hopen 'is trunk the very minute I was sure 'e was gone. 'E said there was letters there I must take care of."

The clock chimed twice, mellow, musically. Larry, sensing it was exactly two, felt his friend's forehead and found it cold. His hand fumbled across Ben Mansour's chest, but could detect no heartbeat. He turned to Giles.

"Oepn the trunk and fetch the letters, then, Giles. Our friend, the man we both loved, is dead."

He dropped on his knees beside the body, his eyes filmed with unshed tears, and a short Berber prayer flitted through his mind. Kneeling thus, he uttered it above his dead friend:

"Merahba bi Koum."

Then in English:

"Heaven be with you."

two pieces and then the screws are tightened by the application of power. The machine is capable of applying the equivalent of 2,300,000 pounds pressure. The investigators watch the experiment and determine with instruments of percision at what point the beam buckles and loses its rigidity.

Many Different Mills.

The Bureau of Standards also has a textile mill for the making of yarns, a paper mill, a cement mill, an elaborate clay products factory which can produce anything from rough brick to the finest porcelain, manufactories for chemicals, for sugar, and for rubber goods, and a tannery. Every process of manufacture is carefully studied by the experts in charge and reports are prepared on the results. When some new sort of material or some new process of manufacture is developed, the research associates go to some commercial manufacturer and make arrangements to try out the new wrinkle in an actual factory. This is to determine whether or not the process of material can be made commercially to advantage.

Then, too, the Bureau has what are called its technical shops. These include a glass blowing shop, one for grinding optical lenses, one for the testing of time pieces, and, of course, an extensive electrical shop where experts constantly study this mysterious force.

The Bureau has a library of 28,000 volumes. They are all of a highly technical nature and to the average reader would doubtless prove rather dull and abstruse, but the scientist can find the most authoritative reference books which have been printed here or in other countries on every scientific subject. In addition to its own library, the Bureau can provide for the use of the research associates any book in the collection of three million in the Library of Congress. The 250,000 volumes in the Public Library of Washington also are available.

The practical use of the public of this research work can be guessed from such facts as that $15,000,000 a year has ben saved from brake lining investigations, $40,000,000 a year from study of the lasting qualities of rubber tires and no less than $100,000,000 a year from research into motor fuels.

The Bureau now is working on a new kind of sugar. It is called levulose and is declared to have a much higher content of sweet than any other type of sugar. It is made by a process discovered by the Bureau from the artichoke and the dahlia.

The Bureau's staff not infrequently is interfered with by the demands of pricate industry. Experts developed in the Bureau often are offered positions paying several times the relatively meagre salaries the government allows. Two states, Alabama and Virginia, have bespoken the cooperation of the Bureau in instructing newly appointed superintendents of weights and measures in the technical intricacies of their duties.

NATURE RENEWS LIFE IN THE SPRING

No Need for You to Drag Around Half Sick Now World's Tonic Will Put You Up to Enjoyment of Life

Thousands of people are miserable every Spring. They think they have "Spring fever," and many of them have come to believe they must go through just so much misery every Spring.

Now what ail people like this is that their blood is full of poison, which in turn has come from the colds, confinements and rich foods of winter. Often the colds leave an inflammation of the membranes of the nose and throat that developes into catarrh. Such people feel tired all the time. They want to hang around the fire and bask in the sun. Their food doesn't taste good, and they haven't any energy.

Cheer up, old friend! What you need is a good medicine that will do three things: First, clear out your system, helping nature to get rid of all waste. Second, purify your blood and help nature enrich it. Third, correct the catarrhal condition before it gets serious.

Thousands of people depend on World's Tonic every Spring. With it they literally make themselves over, recovering energy, getting rich blood that fills them with ambition, and stores up an abundance of the vim and zest that make life worth living.

Don't drag around any more. Get a bottle of World's Tonic at Carnahan's, also Brannon, Wellsville or of any reliable druggist. You will never regret the dollars it costs you. (272)

DIRECT LEVY CAUCUS TOPIC

Assembly Also May Increase Tax on Insurance Companies.

COLUMBUS, May 11.—Proposals that the Ohio legislature enact a direct state tax levy of six tenths of one mill, half of it collectable next December and half in June, 1928, and increase the state tax on all insurance companies one half of one percent were reported under consideration by Republican senators and house members in separate caucuses.

These proposals, it was stated, comprised the recommendations made by a special joint committe of ten, as a proposed legislative program designed to wipe out the deficit in the state treasury. It was estimated that it would provide for increased revenue approximating at least $10,000,000 annually.

Members of the joint committee stated that the suggestion that a law be enacted levying a tax upon jobbers and wholesaler dealers in cigarettes was rejected by the committee.

The senate convened this morning but immediately recessed and the Republican senators went into caucus. A brief session of the house preceded the caucus of Republican house members.

It was reported that the senate caucus, by a vote of 19 to 14, endorsed the proposal to levy a six tenths direct state tax, and decided, by a vote of 21 to 13, to recede from the senate amendment to the Sullivan gas tax increase bill, which provided for reducing the state license fee on pleasaure autos 50 per cent.

During its session this morning, the house reconsidered the vote by which it had concurred in the senate amendment to the Sullivan bill and then, by a vote of 3 yeas to 112 nays, rejected the senate amendment and asked for consideration of the matter by a joint conference committee.

By a vote of 39 to 71, the house rejected a motion that the house suspend its rules and reconsider the vote by which it had defeated the Ott teachers' tenure bill.

NEWS FROM TOWNS IN TRI-STATE DISTRICT

LAUNCH DRIVE ON CORN BORER

Farmers Co-operating in Cleanup Campaign in Two Counties.

More than 89 per cent of the farmers of Mahoning and Columbiana counties are cooperating with the government to the fullest extent in the corn borer clean up campaign, according to a statement issued by H. O. Brown, New Springfield, supervisor for the two counties. Brown based his statement upon local inspectors' reports. Reports from the 42 Ohio counties in the infested area show that 90 to 95 per cent of the farmers are cooperating, and it is expected that this fight will be raised as the campaign progresses.

All but one of the townships in Mahoning county were completed last week. The one remaining and all of Columbiana county will be completed this week, according to Brown. Wet weather has retarded plowing in many cases and thus necessitated more time for completion of the clean-up. Inspectors report that the few farmers who were at first inclined to refuse to clean up or were indifferent, have since reported their willingness to cooperate. It is expected that there will be little for the federal department to do in the way of cleaning up.

The enforcement work on these few farms will begin next week, according to Brown. The seven stubble beaters now in operation in the two counties will be used as well as four large tractor plows. Laborers will be employed to pick up and burn stalks from the fields and around buildings and feed lots. Local men will be employed if possible to get enough laborers. The government pays 32c per hour for this work.

Persons wishing employment must file an application card with Brown; however, application cards can be secured at the county agent's offices or through the local inspectors. Where the farmer does the work, compensation up to $2.00 per acre will be allowed for extra work required, but where the government cleans up, the cost will be charged to the owner.

NEWS FROM TOWNS IN TRI-STATE DISTRICT

Farmers Co-operating in Cleanup Campaign in Two Counties.

More than 89 per cent of the farmers of Mahoning and Columbiana counties are cooperating with the government to the fullest extent in the corn borer clean up campaign, according to a statement issued by H. O. Brown, New Springfield, supervisor for the two counties. Brown based his statement upon local inspectors' reports. Reports from the 42 Ohio counties in the infested area show that 90 to 95 per cent of the farmers are cooperating, and it is expected that this fight will be raised as the campaign progresses.

All but one of the townships in Mahoning county were completed last week. The one remaining and all of Columbiana county will be completed this week, according to Brown. Wet weather has retarded plowing in many cases and thus necessitated more time for completion of the clean-up. Inspectors report that the few farmers who were at first inclined to refuse to clean up or were indifferent, have since reported their willingness to cooperate. It is expected that there will be little for the federal department to do in the way of cleaning up.

The enforcement work on these few farms will begin next week, according to Brown. The seven stubble beaters now in operation in the two counties will be used as well as four large tractor plows. Laborers will be employed to pick up and burn stalks from the fields and around buildings and feed lots. Local men will be employed if possible to get enough laborers. The government pays 52c per hour for this work.

Persons wishing employment must file an application card with Brown; however, application cards can be secured at the county agent's offices or through the local inspectors. Where the farmer does the work, compensation up to $2.00 per acre will be allowed for extra work required, but where the government cleans up, the cost will be charged to the owner.

You needn't be afraid of its containing dope of any kind—it doesn't. Such things are only makeshifts and can at the best give only partial relief.

Recreation Clubs Get Off To Good Start In Opening Season

First Round Games Marked By Hitting Of All League Nines

Pitchers Find Going Rough as Defense Accustoms Itself to Handling 12-inch Sphere; Home Run Socks Enliven Pastime.

With three more games last night the Review-Tribune Recreation league completed its first section of play, bringing every club in the circuit into action in their opening contests.

Pen and pencil have been laid aside for the bat and the boys are tossing the 12 inch ball by way of diversion from the bench and jigger.

Enthusiasm that has marked the contests for the first half of the week as well as the innumerable practice tilts prior indicates a successful campaign.

The league will be hard on its pitchers, as seen in the heavy hitting proclitivies of the various clubs. However, when infields and out-gardeners tighten up after becoming accustomed to the handling of the larger pellet, the base hits that have been crashing off the bats these days probably will dwindle away considerably.

The Johannes Drugs defeated the Workingman's store, 17 to 11, last night at West End. Ernest Bucher and R. Todd starred with the stick, each collecting four safe drives.

A seventh inning rally that netted them six runs for the one frame gave the Bulger Drugs a 14 to 10 decision over the Y. M. C. A. nine at the Northside. Paul White, with four drives, one a homer, and Bromby, with three bingles, were the chief batters for the winners, while Clark, with two hits, a triple and a homer, and "Doc" Bloor with three starred for the "Y." Clark's homer, in the ninth with two on, started a rally for the "Y" which, however, failed to tie it up.

The Review-Tribune cracked out 19 safe bingles to win from the East End Laughlin club, 18 to 9, at Klondyke. Home run socks were registered by Mackey of the winners and Third Baseman Boyd of the Laughlin nine.

The Laughlin nine rallied sharply in the eighth to score six runs but the newspaper outfit's lead was too big to overcome.

LAUGHLIN WINS, 4 TO 2, FROM K. T. K.

Ashe Holds McCoy's Revamped Club to Three Bingles.

Another elongated twirler by the name of Ashe, no relative, however, of the 1926 Ashe of Laughlin, held the strongly reinforced K. T. K. aggregation to three safe swats and carried the Newell tossers to their second consecutive City Industrial League victory last evening at Columbian park. The final score was 4 to 2.

He blanked his opponents for five innings. But the Katies bunched two passed balls, two errors and a couple of passes in the fifth to prevent a shutout. At the bat he contributed two sacrifices in two appearances and his second made possible a run. Catcher Renaldi's attempt to go to third in his first try possibly prevented another tally, Renaldi being nipped at the hot corner as he tried to take the extra base.

Ashe had speed in plenty and a hook that was effective. Twice he fanned Simcox and thrice retired the Ohio potters in a row.

But good as Ashe's twirling feat was, his team doubtlessly would have had tough sledding to come through had not Myers, in the first frame, after making a magnificent stop of Finley's hard drive, thrown high to Fisher with a double play in sight.

A timely double by Babb then produced three runs and a lead that never was overcome. After that, barring the fifth, Sanders, the Katy hurler, had affairs pretty well in hand.

K. T. K. appeared a revamped club with a scintillating infield consisting of Hayes, Fisher, Montgomery and Myers. They flashed a couple of double putout during the engagement. The garden trio boasted an all star cast in McShane, Simcox and Merchant.

On the hilltop was Sanders, a flinger formerly of Salem, who breezed them to Hunselman with a zip that allowed five hits and no player making the second one off his delivery. He also made one of the trio of swats his club had off Ashe, the blow driving in the first run.

Catcher Renaldi, of Laughlin, impressed those who had not previously seen him as did Grimm at second.

Fisher accepted six of seven chances at second and Montgomery five at short, looming for the day as a Peckinpaugh Harris combination in keystone territory.

YOUNGSTOWN, May 11. — Benny Burns vs. Freddy Fitzgerald, K. O. Ferry vs. Dr. Xeny, Emmet Rocco vs. Billy Walsh and Jimmy Sayres vs. Phil Goldstein. This is the card for Al Zill's mit program tonight at Rayen Wood auditorium here.

Burns has wins over such boys as George Harris, George Meenahan, Tommy Burke, Jimmy Trannett, Mickey Dugan and others and has yet to be floored.

Ferry, who will tackle Dr. Xeny, the Pittsburgh student, is rated one of the best welterweights who has ever been turned out of eastern Pennsylvania. He stopped Teddy Welch and won over Steve O'Malley in his last two starts. His share of the purse in the O'Mally fight he turned over to Eddie Wimler, the crippled Fair Haven boxer.

O'FARRELL SATISFIED

Believes he Did Very Well in Trades With M'Graw.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, May 11.—It used to be the notion that John McGraw never gave anybody anything except possibly a punch on the nose but that was long ago when a nose seldom asserted itself and really didn't care who hit it, anyhow. Today, a lot of citizens know that that doesn't go for McGraw any more and one of them is Bob O'Farrell, the new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Robert didn't exactly say so but the writer feels that he can speak for him in gratefully acknowledging the receipt of the following items: One second baseman who is playing the game of his life; one right fielder, now the best in the league; one dependable catcher without whom the Cards might have gotten along very poorly, if at all. Our Mr. McGraw was the donor.

In discussing the matter of philanthropy today, mostly McGraw's, O'Farrell took occasion not to deny the contention that he wouldn't trade Southworth for Roush nor Snyder for the entire staff of Giant catchers nor return Frisch to the Giants for Hornsby, even up at that, he wouldn't affirm the Frisch-Hornsby notion, either, being diplomatic enough to realize that one man's praise is another's pain in the thorax.

"I'm satisfied," was his only comment on the deal that gave the Giants the league's leading hitter and the Cardinals the outstanding individual performer of the campaign to date. "Frisch is an absolute stand-out in the field, at the plate and on the bases. As much as any faction I can think of. He is the reason we are up there in front today. It won't be long until St. Louis forgets about Hornsby and that's hard to do.

"As I see it, both are great ball players. I have one, McGraw has the other."

He laughed when I asked whether he would untrade the pair, so to speak, if given the chance. It was not a question that a smart manager would answer, one way or the other. However, it is nobody's secret that the Cards couldn't hope to get as much out of Hornsby now as they are getting out of Frisch. After what happened in St. Louis last winter. In fact, Hornsby was more of a leader and less of a ball player last year, anyhow.

O'Farrell had no particular theory to account for the sudden miraculous effectiveness of Haines, Alexander, Sherdell and Rhem, the first all-star staff of pitchers to be developed anywhere in some years. He seemed to think it might be that the young men always were good, anyhow. The writer tried to make him confess that he had connived toward the success of the pitchers but the boy was modest and wouldn't take anything except a formal bow.

COBB GIVEN OVATION AS MACKS WIN

Bats of Ty and Simmons Send Tigers to Defeat.

By Less Conklin.

NEW YORK, May 11.—With Ty Cobb and Al Simmons back in harness, the Philadelphia Athletics are bowling smoothly along the road to pennantville today after a disastrous start in the west. What these two sluggers mean to Connie Mack was demonstrated in yesterday's game at Detroit. In their first appearance following their suspension, Cobb walloped a double and Simmons hit a single. Two runs came in and the A's went on to win by a score of 6 to 3, Philadelphia advancing to third place and Detroit dropping to fourth.

A roaring welcome by Detroit fans marked Cobb's return in an alien uniform to the scenes of his early triumphs. The celebration resembled a national political convention, a bargain sale and old home week all rolled into one, and Ty was presented with an automobile.

The hitting of Ruth and Gehrig enabled the Yankees to nose out the Browns, 8 to 7, and retain their two game lead. The Babe hit his seventh homer of the season, tying Gehrig, and Gehrig drove in the winning run.

The White Sox jumped to second place when Tommy Thomas personally conducted the pale hose to a 4 to 3 victory over Washington. Thomas drove in three runs and pitched a neat game in the bargain.

Cleveland's winning streak was struck down in the bloom of youth when the Indians lost to the Red Sox, 6 to 5. Hal Wiltse was the winning twirler. He is the only pitcher who can win for the Sox and he is doing that little thing with great regularity.

In the only game played in the National League, the Cubs took third place away from the Phillies by trimming them, 6 to 3. Homers by Hack Wilson, Hartnett and Stephenson enabled Sheriff Blake to gain the decision over Hal Carlson in a walk.

ARGUE PROBABLE FIELD FOR DERBY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 11.—With the Preakness run and the majority of the horses which met in the contest on the "old hill top" at Pimlico either at the Downs or enroute for the fifty-third renewal of the Kentucky derby Saturday, gossip today turned toward the probable field for Saturday's classic, together with the respective merits of the thoroughbreds of the east and those of the west.

Since time immemorial, the two sections have waged a ceaseless battle for the premier honors of the most coveted prize on the American turf.

Rip Rap's arrival here Monday afternoon caused a stir in the derby colony, and Max Rirsch, trainer of the Sage stables candidate, let it be known his horse is as fit as human hands can make him. In company with Frilette, Rip Rap went a half in 52 3-5, breezing.

Candy Queen came out of the derby trial in such poor physical condition that she will not be a starter, her trainer, G. Walker, said. She is owned by H. Teller Archibald, and the Chicagoan likely will have no starter in the race.

Hydromel, Senator J. N. Camden's eligible, is a doubtful starter, according to his trainer, as a result of his poor showing Monday. The stock of Rolled Stocking, considered the leading western 3-year-old, continues to soar, and he is certain of strong support Saturday.

HOLE IN ONE IS OPENING DAY RECORD

Lem Wasbutzky Accomplishes Feat on Par 3 No. 6.

A hole in one on opening day is an achievement that sets a new record at the Country club course and, incidentally, a mark for other golfers to shoot at the remainder of the season.

The feat was accomplished yesterday afternoon during the playing of a sweepstakes under the direction of "Pro" Rader Jewett, by Lemuel Wasbutzky.

Wasbutzky, shooting with Hubert Chambers and William Gardner, teed off on his drive toward No. 6 green and finished the hole without further effort. It was an accurate drive of 130 yards.

The hole carries a par of three strokes.

ZILL BOOKS FITZ BOUT

YOUNGSTOWN, May 11. — Benny Burns vs. Freddy Fitzgerald, K. O. Ferry vs. Dr. Xeny, Emmet Rocco vs. Billy Walsh and Jimmy Sayres vs. Phil Goldstein. This is the card for Al Zill's mit program tonight at Rayen Wood auditorium here.

Burns has wins over such boys as George Harris, George Meenahan, Tommy Burke, Jimmy Tranner, Mickey Dugan and others and has yet to be floored.

Ferry, who will tackle Dr. Xeny, the Pittsburgh student, is rated one of the best welterweights who has ever been turned out of eastern Pennsylvania. He stopped Teddy Welch and won over Steve O'Malley in his last two starts. His share of the purse in the O'Mally fight he turned over to Eddie Wimler, the crippled Fair Haven boxer.

O'FARRELL SATISFIED

Believes he Did Very Well in Trades With M'Graw.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, May 11.—It used to be the notion that John McGraw never gave anybody anything except possibly a punch on the nose but that was long ago when a nose seldom asserted itself and really didn't care who hit it, anyhow. Today, a lot of citizens know that that doesn't go for McGraw any more and one of them is Bob O'Farrell, the new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Robert didn't exactly say so but the writer feels that he can speak for him in gratefully acknowledging the receipt of the following items: One second baseman who is playing the game of his life; one right fielder, now the best in the league; one dependable catcher without whom the Cards might have gotten along very poorly, if at all. Our Mr. McGraw was the donor.

In discussing the matter of philanthropy today, mostly McGraw's, O'Farrell took occasion not to deny the contention that he wouldn't trade Southworth for Roush nor Snyder for the entire staff of Giant catchers nor return Frisch to the Giants for Hornsby, even up at that, he wouldn't affirm the Frisch-Hornsby notion, either, being diplomatic enough to realize that one man's praise is another's pain in the thorax.

"I'm satisfied," was his only comment on the deal that gave the Giants the league's leading hitter and the Cardinals the outstanding individual performer of the campaign to date. "Frisch is an absolute stand-out in the field, at the plate and on the bases. As much as any faction I can think of. He is the reason we are up there in front today. It won't be long until St. Louis forgets about Hornsby and that's hard to do.

"As I see it, both are great ball players. I have one, McGraw has the other."

He laughed when I asked whether he would untrade the pair, so to speak, if given the chance. It was not a question that a smart manager would answer, one way or the other. However, it is nobody's secret that the Cards couldn't hope to get as much out of Hornsby now as they are getting out of Frisch. After what happened in St. Louis last winter. In fact, Hornsby was more of a leader and less of a ball player last year, anyhow.

O'Farrell had no particular theory to account for the sudden miraculous effectiveness of Haines, Alexander, Sherdell and Rhem, the first all-star staff of pitchers to be developed anywhere in some years. He seemed to think it might be that the young men always were good, anyhow. The writer tried to make him confess that he had connived toward the success of the pitchers but the boy was modest and wouldn't take anything except a formal bow.

COBB GIVEN OVATION AS MACKS WIN

Bats of Ty and Simmons Send Tigers to Defeat.

By Less Conklin.

NEW YORK, May 11.—With Ty Cobb and Al Simmons back in harness, the Philadelphia Athletics are bowling smoothly along the road to pennantville today after a disastrous start in the west. What these two sluggers mean to Connie Mack was demonstrated in yesterday's game at Detroit. In their first appearance following their suspension, Cobb walloped a double and Simmons hit a single. Two runs came in and the A's went on to win by a score of 6 to 3, Philadelphia advancing to third place and Detroit dropping to fourth.

A roaring welcome by Detroit fans marked Cobb's return in an alien uniform to the scenes of his early triumphs. The celebration resembled a national political convention, a bargain sale and old home week all rolled into one, and Ty was presented with an automobile.

The hitting of Ruth and Gehrig enabled the Yankees to nose out the Browns, 8 to 7, and retain their two game lead. The Babe hit his seventh homer of the season, tying Gehrig, and Gehrig drove in the winning run.

The White Sox jumped to second place when Tommy Thomas personally conducted the pale hose to a 4 to 3 victory over Washington. Thomas drove in three runs and pitched a neat game in the bargain.

Cleveland's winning streak was struck down in the bloom of youth when the Indians lost to the Red Sox, 6 to 5. Hal Wiltse was the winning twirler. He is the only pitcher who can win for the Sox and he is doing that little thing with great regularity.

In the only game played in the National League, the Cubs took third place away from the Phillies by trimming them, 6 to 3. Homers by Hack Wilson, Hartnett and Stephenson enabled Sheriff Blake to gain the decision over Hal Carlson in a walk.

ARGUE PROBABLE FIELD FOR DERBY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 11.—With the Preakness run and the majority of the horses which met in the contest on the "old hill top" at Pimlico either at the Downs or enroute for the fifty-third renewal of the Kentucky derby Saturday, gossip today turned toward the probable field for Saturday's classic, together with the respective merits of the thoroughbreds of the east and those of the west.

Since time immemorial, the two sections have waged a ceaseless battle for the premier honors of the most coveted prize on the American turf.

Rip Rap's arrival here Monday afternoon caused a stir in the derby colony, and Max Rirsch, trainer of the Sage stables candidate, let it be known his horse is as fit as human hands can make him. In company with Friliette, Rip Rap went a half in 52 3-5, breezing.

Candy Queen came out of the derby trial in such poor physical condition that she will not be a starter, her trainer, G. Walker, said. She is owned by H. Teller Archibald, and the Chicagoan likely will have no starter in the race.

Hydromel, Senator J. N. Camden's eligible, is a doubtful starter, according to his trainer, as a result of his poor showing Monday. The stock of Rolled Stocking, considered the leading western 3-year-old, continues to soar, and he is certain of strong support Saturday.

HOLE IN ONE IS OPENING DAY RECORD

Lem Wasbutzky Accomplishes Feat on Par 3 No. 6.

A hole in one on opening day is an achievement that sets a new record at the Country club course and, incidentally, a mark for other golfers to shoot at the remainder of the season.

The feat was accomplished yesterday afternoon during the playing of a sweepstakes under the direction of "Pro" Rader Jewett, by Lemuel Wasbutzky.

Wasbutzky, shooting with Hubert Chambers and William Gardner, teed off on his drive toward No. 6 green and finished the hole without further effort. It was an accurate drive of 130 yards.

The hole carries a par of three strokes.

Comedy Singing Novelty Tops Ceramic Screen Bill

Angelina, "Little Italian Girl," Appears With Film Success, "Mother," for Three Days.

The Ceramic theatre, on Thursday, Friday and Saurday, will offer its patrons, a comedy singing novelty, called "The Little Italian Girl," which will be presented in conjunction with the brilliant F. O. B. production, "Mother."

Fred Clifton will assist the featured artist, "Angelina," who comes here from New York successes at Broadway's most prominent theatres, including Keith's Palace and Riverside.

Angelina is four feet, six inches tall, but gifted with a remarkable voice. Besides being able to sing, she has the knack of using her voice for impersonations. One of her numbers describes a trip into a forest. This affords an opportunity to imitate a variety of birds.

The sacrifices that parents, especially mothers, will make for their children, is vividly shown in "Mother," the screen features.

"Mother" is suggested by Kathleen Norris' story, a most human document of a typical American family whose prototype is probably your neighbor.

Thre is nothing fictional to the theme—it is life's story enacted every day and every week and every month, and one leaves the theatre after viewing it with a more pronounced idea of the sacrifices, the hardships, endured by parents, and the burdens, though innocently, placed on fathers and mothers by children.

Belle Bennett, who won world wide fame by her marvelous portrayal in "Stella Dallas," is the typical American middle class mother in this picture, and it is universally agreed that it is her finest effort for the screen.

She portrays a Spartan mother—not the whining sort, but rather the sort of mother that forces a smile while her heart is on the point of breaking.

Crawford Kent, William Bakewell and Joyce Coad compose the family group, and Sam Allen, Mabel Julienne Scott and Charlotte Stevens are prominent in the supporting cast.

CIRCUS DAY AT PATTERSON FIELD

Angelina, "Little Italian Girl," Appears With Film Success, "Mother," for Three Days.

The Ceramic theatre, on Thursday, Friday and Saurday, will offer its patrons, a comedy singing novelty, called "The Little Italian Girl," which will be presented in conjunction with the brilliant F. O. B. production, "Mother."

Fred Clifton will assist the featured artist, "Angelina," who comes here from New York successes at Broadway's most prominent theatres, including Keith's Palace and Riverside.

Angelina is four feet, six inches tall, but gifted with a remarkable voice. Besides being able to sing, she has the knack of using her voice for impersonations. One of her numbers describes a trip into a forest. This affords an opportunity to imitate a variety of birds.

The sacrifices that parents, especially mothers, will make for their children, is vividly shown in "Mother," the screen features.

Thre is nothing fictional to the theme—it is life's story enacted every day and every week and every month and one leaves the theatre after viewing it with a more pronounced idea of the sacrifices, the hardships, endured by parents, and the burdens, though innocently, placed on fathers and mothers by children.

Belle Bennett, who won world wide fame by her marvelous portrayal in "Stella Dallas," is the typical American middle class mother in this picture, and it is universally agreed that it is her finest effort for the screen.

She portrays a Spartan mother—not the whining sort, but rather the sort of mother that forces a smile while her heart is on the point of breaking.

Crawford Kent, William Bakewell and Joyce Coad compose the family group, and Sam Allen, Mabel Julienne Scott and Charlotte Stevens are prominent in the supporting cast.

A postcard mailed in Packham, England, 16 years ago to a friend living a half-hour's walk away, has just been delivered, and because the postage rates have been raised the addressee had to pay the difference.

50 Paint experts showed us how varnish-stains differ

They all say mahogany on the can but Devoe says mahogany on the wood

WE NEVER realized the difference between varnish stains until we saw 50 paint experts test 8 different makes and pick Devoe Mirrolac as the varnish stain which reproduced most clearly their conception of the true hard wood tones. Use Mirrolac and be sure. It not only duplicates the desired hard wood tone, but at the same time adds a tough, beautiful coat of varnish.

RINI SEEKS ANOTHER TRIAL

Today

We Excel in Smallpox.

Mr. Mellon Housekeeping.

Jeopard, Double—Triple.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

THE United States has more smallpox than any country out of Asia. There were 33,752 smallpox cases in this country in 1926. The reason is simple. We have more smallpox because we have more opposing vaccination, which prevents smallpox.

In Europe, where vaccination is intelligently enforced, 10 nations had not one single case of smallpox in 1926. Eighteen nations had only 1,000 cases among them.

IT IS enlightening to read that smallpox is more frequent where opposition to vaccination is strongest, southern California and northern England.

We had in 1926 six times as many cases of smallpox as Russia, with more population than we have, and in Russia, before Catherine the Second was vaccinated, scores of thousands died of smallpox every year. The little boy that supplied vaccine for the Russian empress, by the way, was actually created Duke of Smallpox.

SECRETARY MELLON, still busy with financial housecleaning, has called in the second issue of Liberty bonds, paying 4 1-4 per cent, and will pay on Nov. 15. He does not feel that Uncle Sam should continue to pay such outrageously high interest. Calling these bonds will save taxpayers many millions every year. The taxpayers who hire Mr. Mellon to look after their finances for a salary less than that of a second-rate expert accountant, have a bargain.

GOVERNOR FISHER of Pennsylvania vetoes a bill to protect bootleggers against being punished in both federal and state courts, called "The Double Jeopardy Bill."

HOWEVER, bootlegging is an exceptional industry, with something of "double jeopardy" about it.

Bootleg whisky, for instance, can make you blind immediately, destroy your kidneys soon and ultimately cause death. That's a triple jeopardy.

Promised Immunity, he Takes Stand for Prosecution in Trial of Streitenberger, Charged With Mellett Murder.

S. A. LENGEL CASE AFTERMATH, CLAIM

Testifies Deposed Police Department Member Said "Someone Ought to Run Mellett Out of Town."

CANTON, O., May 11.—Hopes of the state were apparently realized today, following testimony of Louis Mazer, formerly of East Liverpool, in the trial of Floyd Streitenberger, former city detective, charged with complicity in the murder of Don Mellett, Canton publisher, here last summer.

Tells of Hatching of Plot.

Mazer, indicted for first degree murder, in connection with the crime, but promised immunity for turning state's evidence, was the first witness to take the stand this morning. He testified that the plot which resulted in the murder of the newspaperman was originally hatched immediately following the hearing for S. A. Lengel, ousted Canton chief of police, a year ago last March.

At that time, according to Mazer's testimony, Streitenberger told Mazer, who was present at the hearing, that "some one ought to run Mellett out of town, because he is causing Lengel too much trouble."

Admits He Hired McDermott.

Mazer said he and Streitenberger were "good friends," and often met at Streitenberger's home, on the street and in Lengel's office. He admitted that he had hired Patrick McDermott, convicted gunman, now serving a life term for the murder, "to slug Mellett," indicating there was no plot to kill, and had agreed to pay McDermott $200 for the "job," but claims he did so at Streitenberger's suggestion.

Testifying, concerning a letter which former Prosecutor C. B. McClintock had written to the chief of police on July 17, one month before the murder, which requested an investigation of a "certain house, owned by Louis Mazer, and operated by Doll Carey, known as Mazer's sweetheart," Mazer said that Streitenberger had turned the letter over to him, and that they had had "quite a laugh" over it.

Other Witnesses Testify.

Included among witnesses yesterday were Coroner T. C. McQuate, whose testimony was of the same technical character as submitted in the McDermott and Ben Rudner trials. Mrs. Florence Mellett, widow of the slain newspaperman; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Vail, friends and neighbors of the Mellett family, and Dr. Guy Maxwell, Mellett family physician, testified concerning events immediately preceding and following the murder.

Prosecutor Harter declares the state will present evidence to show that Streitenberger conspired with others, to bring certain men to Canton to do away with Mellett and that the former city detective helped McDermott to escape, following the shooting.

The state department, it was said, considers it has gone as far as it can in the matter of merely publishing Herrick's warning.

21-PAGE REPORT

Call for Service of Ladder Truck; Ask Main Tests.

Increase in the personnel of the fire department from 13 to 28 men and the erection of a modern fire headquarters building on or near the site of the present building was recommended today in the report of the committee on fire prevention and engineering standards, National Board of Fire Underwriters, following an investigation made by Engineers George Tatnall, R. F. Goodhue and W. S. Rathbun, here last December.

The report, which covers 21 pages, is a review of the city's water supply, fire fighting equipment and fire department, together with structural conditions and hazards which were found here. The engineers spent approximately three weeks in their investigation.

In recommending the addition of at least 15 men to the fire fighting force, the report says that "the city has for many years jeopardized its citizens and its property by maintaining a fire department so seriously undermanned as to be almost useless for other than incipient fires requiring one or two hose lines and these conditions are reflected in a high loss per fire.

Conditions Serious.

"Since 1922 conditions have been more serious," the report continues. "In effect the protection available is that rendered by only one hose company, which also is so undermanned as to be handicapped in taking one hose line to the upper stories of a building. In addition this company

Walter Main Circus at Patterson Field

Troupe[illegible]ds tooting calliopes, cavorting clowns, lumbering herds of elephants and camels, rumbling cages and tableau wagons, prancing horses in spangled accouterments, pretty women and handsome men— all these and more—took possession of the downtown streets shortly before noon today when the Walter L. Main Circus gave its daily street parade.

Through the densely-crowded streets the procession measured its gaudy passage—truly a fanastic panorama. By the side of the band wagons and behind the shrieking calliopes a cloud of boys kept tireless pace, reeling off block after block, but gorged with happiness. The tigers and lions looked bored, and the hyena yawned with accumulated ennui. Gorgeously costumed men and women riders with spangles and breastplates of shining gold and silver; richly-decked camels with riders from the great desert and the elephants swaying to and fro with monotonous tread; little clowns, big clowns, clowns of all shapes and sizes; beautiful tableau wagons of burnished gold and flaming red; the side-splitting clown band—a never-to-be-forgotten pageant of triumphal splendor.

APPEAL HINTED

Carbicella and Fusco Plead Guilty; Sentence Suspended.

Salvatore Rini, 22, East Liverpool, convicted of second degree murder in the death of Pasquale (Patsy) Anania, 25, of Wellsville, today re-opened his fight in common pleas court, Lisbon, to escape life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Rini's attorneys, W. O. O'Grady and Raymond Knepper, both of Wellsville, were to argue their motion for a new trial. Prosecutor Robert M. Brookes was prepared to oppose the motion.

Judge W. F. Lones, who is presiding, was expected to pronounce sentence in the event he decided to overrule the defense motion.

Possibility of the Rini case being carried to the appellate court, in event of an unfavorable decision by the lower tribunal, was hinted.

Carbicella-Fusco Case.

Rocco Carbicella and Frank Fusco, both of Wellsville, facing a new indictment charging an attempt to bribe Sheriff George Wright to "lay off" an investigation of the murder of Patrolman James Kenney, of Wellsville, changed their pleas from not guilty to guilty when their second trial was called shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Declaring he had taken into consideration the fact that they "had been improperly advised by other persons," Judge Lones sentenced them to serve from one to ten years in the penitentiary, and then suspended the sentence pending their good behavior. The two men, who have been at liberty under $5,000 bond each, are to report every 15 days to Sheriff Wright, who will act as parole officer.

Carbicella and Fusco, who are alleged to have offered $390 to Sheriff Wright, were found guilty in their first trial, but later granted another hearing. Today's trial was called on indictments returned by the grand jury on Jan. 5.

EIGHT ADDITIONAL U. S. DESTROYERS SEARCH FOR FRENCH AIRMEN WHO ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE ONE CHANCE IN THOUSAND FOR SAFETY

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Eight additional destroyers of the coast guard rum fleet have been sent out from New England ports to search for Captains Nungesser and Coli, missing trans-Atlantic fliers, it was announced at headquarters today.

The cutter Mojave, with an airplane aboard, is also out at sea.

One chance in a thousand was the faint hope held out by navy department officials for the safety of the missing aviators.

Two possibilities were suggested: That they have reached a deserted spot on the Labrador coast, or that they were picked up in mid-ocean by a steamer not equipped with wireless.

The sturdy plane is not floating in the mid-Atlantic with the two fliers clinging to it. Of this navy department officials are convinced.

"It is hardly conceivable that their plane could now be afloat," said Edward P. Warner, assistant secretary of the navy for air. "If a landing was made in a rough sea they may have been carried under the water almost instantaneously."

The fact that most of the course of the fliers was north of the ship lanes brought forward the possibility that they may have reached land on this side of the Atlantic. If so they may not be heard from for weeks.

Despite the putting to sea of naval vessels at Boston and the search undertaken by coast guard ships chances of finding bits of wreckage are said to be remote.

The aviators, it was pointed out by Warner, may have fallen at any place in an area of more than a million square miles. Therefore, it was indicated, the navy will not attempt to "blanket" the sea with searching vessels unless the French government should urgently request such action. The navy searched for Commander John Rodgers in the Pacific for several days when they knew within 100 miles of where he fell on the Hawaiian flight, it was pointed out.

When the French fliers discarded a powerful radio to save weight and chose a route north of the ship lanes to save distance they virtually cut themselves off from hope of rescue should disaster overtake them over the ocean, navy officials said.

The more optimistic naval aviators, feeling keenly the failure of the Frenchmen, pointed to the rescues of Harry Hawker and Lieut. Antonio Locatelli, after being lost in the Atlantic for days, and to the exploit of Commander Rodgers in the Pacific, to bolster their hope that they may yet be found.

Fog Over North Atlantic.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Despite careful and widespread search on both sides of the Atlantic and along the northern steamship lane by United States, Canadian, English and French warcraft, coast guard and merchant ships, no trace had been found today of Capt. Charles Nungesser, his fellow airman, Capt. Francois Coli, nor their airplane.

Bad weather and fog prevail over the north Atlantic are hampering the greatest international quest ever undertaken for a missing aviator.

It has not been more than 75 hours since Nungesser and his companion hopped off at Paris in the "White Bird" in their attempt to make a non-stop flight to New York, but in view of unfavorable conditions and the absence of any reassuring developments hope for the missing airmen is virtually abandoned.

Despite a cabled warning from Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, that the French people might misinterpret an attempt by American airmen to fly to Paris while Nungesser is missing, aviators Lloyd Bertaud and Clarence Chamberlin are making preparations to hop off from Curtiss field on Saturday morning if weather conditions permit. The Herrick warning was considered by officials of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, builders of the Bellanca plane in which Bertaud and Chamberlin plan to fly, but they decided to disregard it.

Government craft nosed slowly through the fog bound north Atlantic in hope of discovering some trace of the "White Bird" kept up continuel wireless communication with stations throughout the night, but reported that they had picked up no trace of the missing French plane.

PARIS, May 11.—At noon today no news of any kind had been received about the missing French aviators, Capt. Charles Nungesser and Capt. Francois Coli, and the hope that they might be found alive was rapidly waning.

Failure of searching ships to find any trace of the lost airmen and their plane, the "White Bird," intensified gloom which is grapping the French nation over the failure of the flight.

Lindbergh Arrives in St. Louis.

Two Physicians Testify Former Auditor Mentally Unbalanced.

John C. Bond, former state auditor, is suffering from either paranoia or paresis, mental diseases, two physicians yesterday told a jury called in intermediate court to test his sanity.

While testimony of these witnesses was being presented by counsel for Bond, cross examination and the opening statement by state counsel indicated that they would question whether his condition was such that he could not distinguish between right and wrong contest any move to bar prosecution on charges of embezzlement on that ground.

Neither of the physicians who testified would say definitely in answer to questions by Bond's counsel that he could not distinguish between right and wrong, but both declared he was not sane. The first of these witnesses, Dr. George A. McQueen who practiced in Charleston for 20 years and attended Mr. Bond for a blood infection, to which he attributed large part of his patient's present mental ills, testified twice. The first occasion was before Judge H. K. Black and on the strength of that testimony and of "other information coming to the court, including the court's own observation of the defendant," the jury to hear the sanity issue was ordered.

Dr. McQueen repeated his testimony before the jury, begining with his treatment of Mr. Bond for the blood infection in 1912 or 1913. The patient failed to carry out that treatment to its conclusion, he said, and this he called one factor in the subsequent mental breakdown. After Mr. Bond's return from army service in France the physician noted a marked change, including greater nervousness and a part of the present condition might be attributed, he thought, to the nerve wearing experiences of the war. Infected tonsils and teeth to which Mr. Bond did not give proper care and excitement attending his entry into politics, he also included as factors.

His opinion was that Mr. Bond was suffering from either paranoia or the early stages of paresis, but which, he could not tell. Asked directly whether the effects of these would be for him not to know the consequences of his acts and lack moral responsibility, the doctor said he was not enough of a neurologist to tell. When asked again if he believed Mr. Bond could distinguish right from wrong, Dr. McQueen objected that the form of that question required by law was not fair to the witness because he thought no medical man could say positively as to that.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The controversy raging over the candidacy of Roy A. Haynes for the post of federal prohibition commissioner may be settled through the appointment of a compromise "bone-dry" prohibitionist, having the support of the Anti-Saloon league, it was reported today in administration circles.

The candidacy of Haynes, long a stalwart of the Anti-Saloon league, suffered a setback when both wet and dry spokesmen opened fire on his qualifications for the commissionership.

Administration leaders were known to be looking for a compromise candidate. Todate, the name of Seymour Lowman, a former lieutenant-governor of New York, has been the most frequently mentioned. Lowman has the endorsement of the New York Anti-Saloon league, numerous temperance societies, W. C. T. U. officials, and of Ogden Mills, assistant secretary of the treasury.

"A small amount of work tired me out. I had taken so much medicine without relief that I was afraid I would have to undergo an operation. A friend told me about Redwood's Tepee Tonic and was so enthusiastic about it that I resolved to try it.

"I have now taken two bottles and feel fine. My food does not distress me and I am stronger. My bowels are regular, my complexion is good and I seldom have headaches or dizzy spells. My nerves are better, too."

Redwood's Tepee Herb Tonic is recommended and sold in East Liverpool by Carnahan's Drug Store and by well stocked druggists everywhere.

A young woman walked into a bank the other day and stepping up to the window, said:

"I would like to open an account at this bank, please."

"We shall be very glad to accommodate you," said the teller. "What amount do you wish to deposit?"

"Oh," she said smiling, "I mean a regular charge account such as I have at the department stores."

"Did your friend completely recover from his broken leg?"

"No. Complications set in."

"How so?"

"He married his nurse!"

Specialists have developed a tiny tablet called midol. It's a simple thing, utterly harmless to a girl of fourteen, but it brings relief in five to seven minutes. And is effective twelve hours or longer!

Midol it NOT a narcotic. It has no effect whatever on heart or nervous system. It acts directly on those organs affected by menstruation. They function normally, as they should, but the pain is banished. Complete relief—yes, perfect comfort —follows midol.

"A letter which I read in the paper about Carter's Little Liver Pills fitted my own case so closely that I could not help trying them and am very happy I did." So write's Mr. Frank J Trumbull of Jersey City, N. J., whose letter goes on to say: "I had heard about Carter's Little Liver Pills for years but never knew they helped overcome poor appetite and sour stomach until I read about another man in the same plight who took Carter's with good results. I tried them and can honestly say that they freed me of nasty gas on stomach, so that I can now eat without getting bilious, and they improved my appetite fully 100%. Another Tragedy of The Air

Belief prevails today that the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, for which a prize of $25,000 has been offered, has been marked by another tragedy, for a two-day search has resulted in no trace of Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francois Coli, two daring French airmen who left Paris in their airplane, "White Bird," Sunday morning and were due to arrive in New York at noon Monday. The possibility remains that the intrepid war birds have flown north of their course and are somewhere in the desolate solitude of Laborador, or they were picked up by some fishing craft off the grand banks and may not be heard from for weeks. However, the opinion in the capitals of two continents is that both men are dead.

In the meantime, American aviators who are planning to hop off in the Bellanca monoplane for the French capital, after repairs to their craft which was damaged in the first attempt to leave the United States, have deferred their departure until the fate of the French flyers has been determined.

The public has been much distresses by the number of aviation casualties lately. Ten naval aviators have been killed within three weeks. Naturally outsiders wonder whether something is wrong. Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, made the following statement the other day:

"The recent naval aviation disasters, while most regrettable, should not be considered without first making a study of the history of aviation accidents during the preceding 12 months. During the 12 months ending March 26, 1927, over 20,000,000 passenger miles were flown by naval planes, during which time there were 19 deaths, or a death for every million miles traveled by the average aviator.

"The airplane is safer today than ever before, and the unfortunate deaths which have occurred during the last few weeks are not a fair criterion of either the safety of the airplane or the efficiency of the personnel operating them, but rather must be laid to the vagaries of fortune."

The public hopes this is so. Aviation must go forward. Its development cannot stop now. But the public would like to feel sure that there are no carelessness, no foolish hazards, no needless waste of human life.

French Forts

The world is surprised by the announcement that France is going to begin at once constructing a vast system of fortifications along her frontiers.

Next year's budget provides an enormous sum for building what is described as "a powerful series of defenses and fortresses at strong points, to be linked with the latest improved earthworks, with strategic highway, railways, airdromes, battery emplacements, troop-assembling shelters and other appurtenances that were demonstrated as necessities to the Great War."

Premier Poincare announces that a series of giant forts like those barring invasion from the east—Belfort, Metz, Toul and Verdun—will be built along the north frontier and through the Ardennes. And all this must be completed before the government will reduce the military service of conscripts to one year.

That stirs a universal sigh of discouragement. The need of such mighty and costly defenses was supposed to be past, even if "the war to end war" failed to accomplish its full purpose.

Are they really necessary? It is hard for Americans to think so. Where is the peril? From Germany, disarmed and apparently disposed to be friendly, or at least conciliatory? From Great Britain, which obviously wants no more war with any first-class power? From Russia, which is broken economically and politically, and far away? From Italy, strong-spirited but poor in resources? From America, which wants no more wars anywhere?

It is had for us to judge the necessities or appreciate the fears of France, but one thing at least it is safe to say: America should furnish no more money for any such purpose as that, to any European nation.

Tyrannies

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is lambasting Italian Fascism just as hard as he has lambasted Russian Communism, therein showing himself a pretty level-headed middle-of-the?roader in politics and economics.

Speaking of Mussolini's new "charter of labor," he says:

"The world has never witnessed a greater exhibition of autocracy gone mad. The 'charter' is a proclamation of enslavement, in that it reduces the working people to a condition of industrial servitude. It is a blow at human freedom, and sets up compulsory methods of industry for private initiative and freedom of contract.

"Evidently democracy in the affairs of the nation, as well as in industry throughout Italy, has perished."

He reminds the American public, however, that "autocracy cannot endure." All history proves that. The longer civilization continues, and the more highly civilized man becomes, the more frequently and more thoroughly democracy breaks through and asserts the basic human rights of personal freedom in thought and action, of private initiative and freedom of contract.

Americans who praise Fascism approve it for others—not for themselves. The typical American no more desires to live under the state tyranny of Fascism than the class of tyranny of Sovietism.

LIVING PROOF

Complaint has been made that some of the so-called model houses which go up so fast in the suburban district of New York are built to be sold, not to be lived in.

Be that as it may, a little story is being told of a real estate dealer whose operations in the commuting zone have been highly successful. The only trouble is that he can't work the same side of the street twice.

He had snared a prospective buyer—one of those ten-dollar-down-and-ten-dollars-a-week-as-long-as-you-live prospects, and in his car the promoter took him out on Long Island to look at a cottage which he thought would just suit the needs of the customer.

The building was in the process of construction. It had been started on Monday; on Friday it would be ready for occupancy. But this was a Wednesday, and while the foundations were finished and the sides were up and the roof had been pasted on, the painting and the interior trim and the finishing touches were yet to be added.

The dealer led the proposed victim inside the structure. The plasterers were just concluding their part of the contract.

Now then," said the salesman, beaming with pride, "what do you think of this for a house?"

"Ain't she built kind of flimsy?" inquired the homeseeker.

"Flimsy? Flimsy?" screamed the indignant realtor. "You call this a flimsy job? Wait, I'll show you.

"What?" asked Jim.

"Jim, step up close to the dividing wall between us. Get as close to it as you can."

"All right," said Jim, "here I am, almost touching it."

"Now, Jim, you can hear me speaking through the wal, can't you?"

'Sure."

"But you can't see me through this wall, can you, Jim?"

"Nope."

With a smile of triumph and satisfaction the promoter turned to the customer:

"Now, that's what I call a wall!" he said.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 11.—Second Avenue offers more colorful little cafes than almost any other section of Manhattan. There are those featuring favorite dishes of Armenia, Turkey, Rumania, Sweden and, of course, a large number of Kosher restaurants.

There is singular informality not found on Broadway or side streets. The proprietors join guests at tables to suggest choice foods. Dogs frolic around the floor and cats fluff their backs and plume their tails in friendliness.

Ancient patriarchs in skull caps sit in shadowy corners, puffing cigarettes in silence. Flapper news girls—potential Fannie Brices—drift in with the latest editions of Yiddish and American newspapers. In one there is a blind pianist who smokes cigars.

Children are not always welcomed and many of the menus carry the line, "Children Service—20 cents extra." All feature music of a better sort. There is Joseph Moskowitz, who plays the cymbalon in one and gives occasional high-brow recitals uptown.

There is no hurry of jazz. When Second Avenue dines out it is an all-evening event. They eat leisurely and remain until midnight to listen to the music, sing folk songs and exchange gossip. Some play dominoes, cubito or chuck dice.

A bottle of shelter is at each table and napkins are starched and standing. Horseradish is dyed red. And great plates of appetizers with a mixture of kraut, huge red peppers, chopped onions, pickled fish and such are free or 5 cents an order.

Celery beer is a favorite beverage of Second Avenue. Some cafes sell mild wines, but never cocktails or whisky. Such dishes as frigaroy on the stick, mushi, captashala, bortsch, broiled peppers, stuffed fish, smoked goose, and herring are popular.

Sidewalks in front of radio shops and gramophone stores on Second Avenue are always crowded if there is a free concert. Old men and shawled, wigged women bring their camp stools and perch along the curbs.

Jutting off Second Avenue are many old-fashioned boarding houses with basement dining rooms, papered in cheerful red. Boarders dine at long tables under gaudy chandeliers and afterward gather in front parlors with fern-trimmed windows, to discuss happenings of the day.

The Yiddish Art Theatre, criss-crossed with flamboyant posters, has a waiting line usually at dusk. Stage heroes and heroines are taken very seriously and most of the crowd is there for a peep at them. If one is sighted the cheering and applauding can be heard blocks waay. Old favorites are never forgotten.

There is a story of a woman of wealth going to a jaded straw blonde who had enamored her husband and asking her to clear out of the country in exchange for a $100,000 check.

"But he loves me," countered the blonde.

"Do you value his love at $100,000?"

There was a thoughtful silence and then a "Gimme the check, lady, you win." And that ended another Broadway love.

Love seems to curl up quickly in Manhattan. Recently a married couple gave an elaborate and sumptuous dinner at one of the smartest restaurants. Two mornings later the wife read of one of those "I will not be responsible for debts contracted by my wife" notices in the paper.

"What happened?" telephoned a friend.

"He met a new charmer at our party," was the laconic reply. "She's in—I'm out."

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Research Associates.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Practical aids to American industry are constanly being furnished by the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce through what are known as its research associates. Back in 1901 Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, one of the most outstanding scientists which the country has produced, proposed that Congress enact a law which would throw the bureaus of the government open to the uses of private industry. In connection with his experimentation resulting in the invention of the telephone, Dr. Bell found that the government had information and facilities which could materially assist inventors.

The privilege of using government material lies in the discretion of heads of the various bureaus, but no serious effort for the betterment of some product, although produced by a private corporation, ever is refused.

The list of industries which are being aided in their productive work is a long one. The industries themselves pay the salaries of the research experts but the work is done chiefly in the government's own laboratories. Every important industry has some sort of trade association of which the individual manufacturers or producers are members, paying dues or in some way contributing to the support of the organization. The coal industry, for instance, has an association the members of which are operators. They pay a fraction of a cent on every ton of coal they take from their mines. In this way the distribution of cost is equitable, the big operator paying in proportion to his output and the small one left free from an undue burden. All, however, participate equally in the benefits derived from the research work done on behalf of the organization.

Nor is the privilege of sharing in the benefits of research conducted with the cooperation of the American government confined to organizations of the United States. Foreign associations may participate provided they meet the requirements of the bureau. For instance the Academy of Science Engineers of Stockholm in Sweden is acoorded research privileges.

Number Increases Steadily.

When the plan first was adopted in 1901 theer were but ten research associates admitted to the government laboratories. Now there are sixty-one and it seems possible that this number will increase as the industries are coming more and more to realize the value of government assistance.

Typical work of this type includes the study of metallurgy, the welding of railway rails, structural materials in the study of which tensile strength, endurance under water, under changes of temperature, and such matters are tested; textiles, paper, dyes, the ability of various building materials to resist fire, acoustics involving the study of how various buildings materials react to sound waves, radio, automobile fuels, and a host of other things.

One of the especially interesting laboratories of the Bureau of Standards is that in which airplane propellers are tested. The process is called "testing to destruction." There is a building constructed of very heavy materials, usually thick walls and roof.

An airplane motor is set in position in this building and the motor turned on. The researchers stand outside the building and peep through small openings in the walls. By the use of an electric connection they then turn the motor faster and faster. Ultimately the tremendous centrifugal speed causes the propeller to fly to pieces. Were a man inside the building he probably would be killed by the bits of wood flying at immense velocity.

By this test the scientists determine what kinds of wood can stand the greatest centrifugal force, and, in accordance with their findings, recommendations are made for specifications for Army and Navy planes and the data made available to commercial companies.

Another interesting machine is one which tests the strength of steel beams. It is important for structural engineers such as bridge builders and erectors of skyscrappers to know how much pressure can be withstood by a steel beam of given dimensions. The machine consists of two huge pieces of steel connected by a series of powerful screws. The steel beam to be tested is placed endwise between the Ben Romano broke under long hours and heavy work. On verge of breakdown, tried Tanlac and regained lost vitality. Praises Tanlac highly.

Ben Romano lives at 799 Bowery St., Akron Ohio. A native of Birmingham, Ala., he has a host of friend in that city. While working for the Sloss-Sheffield Iron Company there he spared no effort to succeed, putting all his strength and energy into his work. "Lugging pig iron ten hours a day takes strength and vitality," said Mr. Romano, "and in the end it got me. For three months I was played out, nervous—on the verge of a break down.

"My stomach and liver went back on me, and heartburn, gas and sourness, kept me in constant misery. I could neither eat, sleep nor digest normally, so grew steadily weaker. Shortly before coming to Akron I started on Tanlac and have been in the pink of condition ever since. My friends would congratulate me on my improvement and I would always say that Tanlac and nothing else is responsible for the change. It certainly put an end to my troubles."

"If you feel below par, try Tanlac, nature's own tonic and body builder. Made from barks, roots and herbs. Your druggist has Tanlac. Over 52 million bottles sold.

Another Tragedy of The Air

Belief prevails today that the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, for which a prize of $25,000 has been offered, has been marked by another tragedy, for a two-day search has resulted in no trace of Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francois Coli, two daring French airmen who left Paris in their airplane, "White Bird," Sunday morning and were due to arrive in New York at noon Monday. The possibility remains that the intrepid war birds have flown north of their course and are somewhere in the desolate solitude of Laborador, or they were picked up by some fishing craft off the grand banks and may not be heard from for weeks. However, the opinion in the capitals of two continents is that both men are dead.

In the meantime, American aviators who are planning to hop off in the Bellanca monoplane for the French capital, after repairs to their craft which was damaged in the first attempt to leave the United States, have deferred their departure until the fate of the French flyers has been determined.

The public has been much distresses by the number of aviation casualties lately. Ten naval aviators have been killed within three weeks. Naturally outsiders wonder whether something is wrong. Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, made the following statement the other day:

"The recent naval aviation disasters, while most regrettable, should not be considered without first making a study of the history of aviation accidents during the preceding 12 months. During the 12 months ending March 26, 1927, over 20,000,000 passenger miles were flown by naval planes, during which time there were 19 deaths, or a death for every million miles traveled by the average aviator.

"The airplane is safer today than ever before, and the unfortunate deaths which have occurred during the last few weeks are not a fair criterion of either the safety of the airplane or the efficiency of the personnel operating them, but rather must be laid to the vagaries of fortune."

The public hopes this is so. Aviation must go forward. Its development cannot stop now. But the public would like to feel sure that there are no carelessness, no foolish hazards, no needless waste of human life.

French Forts

The world is surprised by the announcement that France is going to begin at once constructing a vast system of fortifications along her frontiers.

Next year's budget provides an enormous sum for building what is described as "a powerful series of defenses and fortresses at strong points, to be linked with the latest improved earthworks, with strategic highway, railways, airdromes, battery emplacements, troop-assembling shelters and other appurtenances that were demonstrated as necessities to the Great War."

Premier Poincare announces that a series of giant forts like those barring invasion from the east—Belfort, Metz, Toul and Verdun—will be built along the north frontier and through the Ardennes. And all this must be completed before the government will reduce the military service of conscripts to one year.

That stirs a universal sigh of discouragement. The need of such mighty and costly defenses was supposed to be past, even if "the war to end war" failed to accomplish its full purpose.

Are they really necessary? It is hard for Americans to think so. Where is the peril? From Germany, disarmed and apparently disposed to be friendly, or at least conciliatory? From Great Britain, which obviously wants no more war with any first-class power? From Russia, which is broken economically and politically, and far away? From Italy, strong-spirited but poor in resources? From America, which wants no more wars anywhere?

It is had for us to judge the necessities or appreciate the fears of France, but one thing at least it is safe to say: America should furnish no more money for any such purpose as that, to any European nation.

Tyrannies

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is lambasting Italian Fascism just as hard as he has lambasted Russian Communism, therein showing himself a pretty level-headed middle-of-the?roader in politics and economics.

Speaking of Mussolini's new "charter of labor," he says:

"The world has never witnessed a greater exhibition of autocracy gone mad. The 'charter' is a proclamation of enslavement, in that it reduces the working people to a condition of industrial servitude. It is a blow at human freedom, and sets up compulsory methods of industry for private initiative and freedom of contract.

"Evidently democracy in the affairs of the nation, as well as in industry throughout Italy, has perished."

He reminds the American public, however, that "autocracy cannot endure." All history proves that. The longer civilization continues, and the more highly civilized man becomes, the more frequently and more thoroughly democracy breaks through and asserts the basic human rights of personal freedom in thought and action, of private initiative and freedom of contract.

Americans who praise Fascism approve it for others—not for themselves. The typical American no more desires to live under the state tyranny of Fascism than the class of tyranny of Sovietism.

LIVING PROOF

Complaint has been made that some of the so-called model houses which go up so fast in the suburban district of New York are built to be sold, not to be lived in.

Be that as it may, a little story is being told of a real estate dealer whose operations in the commuting zone have been highly successful. The only trouble is that he can't work the same side of the street twice.

He had snared a prospective buyer—one of those ten-dollar-down-and-ten-dollars-a-week-as-long-as-you-live prospects, and in his car the promoter took him out on Long Island to look at a cottage which he thought would just suit the needs of the customer.

The building was in the process of construction. It had been started on Monday; on Friday it would be ready for occupancy. But this was a Wednesday, and while the foundations were finished and the sides were up and the roof had been pasted on, the painting and the interior trim and the finishing touches were yet to be added.

The dealer led the proposed victim inside the structure. The plasterers were just concluding their part of the contract.

Now then," said the salesman, beaming with pride, "what do you think of this for a house?"

"Ain't she built kind of flimsy?" inquired the homeseeker.

"Flimsy? Flimsy?" screamed the indignant realtor. "You call this a flimys job? Wait, I'll show you.

"What?" asked Jim.

"Jim, step up close to the dividing wall between us. Get as close to it as you can."

"All right," said Jim, "here I am, almost touching it."

"Now, Jim, you can hear me speaking through the wal, can't you?"

'Sure."

"But you can't see me through this wall, can you, Jim?"

"Nope."

With a smile of triumph and satisfaction the promoter turned to the customer:

"Now, that's what I call a wall!" he said.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK ,May 11.—Second Avenue offers more colorful little cafes than almost any other section of Manhattan. There are those featuring favorite dishes of Armenia, Turkey, Rumania, Sweden and, of course, a large number of Kosher restaurants.

There is singular informality not found on Broadway or side streets. The proprietors join guests at tables to suggest choice foods. Dogs frolic around the floor and cats fluff their backs and plume their tails in friendliness.

Ancient patriarchs in skull caps sit in shadowy corners, puffing cigarettes in silence. Flapper news girls—potential Fannie Brices—drift in with the latest editions of Yiddish and American newspapers. In one there is a blind pianist who smokes cigars.

Children are not always welcomed and many of the menus carry the line, "Children Service—20 cents extra." All feature music of a better sort. There is Joseph Moskowitz, who plays the cymbalon in one and gives occasional high-brow recitals uptown.

There is no hurry of jazz. When Second Avenue dines out it is an all-evening event. They eat leisurely and remain until midnight to listen to the music, sing folk songs and exchange gossip. Some play dominoes, cubito or chuck dice.

A bottle of shelter is at each table and napkins are starched and standing. Horseradish is dyed red. And great plates of appetizers with a mixture of kraut, huge red peppers, chopped onions, pickled fish and such are free or 5 cents an order.

Celery beer is a favorite beverage of Second Avenue. Some cafes sell mild wines, but never cocktails or whisky. Such dishes as frigaroy on the stick, musht, captashala, bortsch, broiled peppers, stuffed fish, smoked goose, and herring are popular.

Sidewalks in front of radio shops and gramophone stores on Second Avenue are always crowded if there is a free concert. Old men and shawled, wigged women bring their camp stools and perch along the curbs.

The Yiddish Art Theatre, criss-crossed with flamboyant posters, has a waiting line usually at dusk. Stage heroes and heroines are taken very seriously and most of the crowd is there for a peep at them. If one is sighted the cheering and applauding can be heard blocks waay. Old favorites are never forgotten.

There is a story of a woman of wealth going to a jaded straw blonde who had enamored her husband and asking her to clear out of the country in exchange for a $100,000 check.

"But he loves me," countered the blonde.

"Do you value his love at $100,000?"

There was a thoughtful silence and then a "Gimme the check, lady, you win." And that ended another Broadway love.

Love seems to curl up quickly in Manhattan. Recently a married couple gave an elaborate and sumptuous dinner at one of the smartest restaurants. Two mornings later the wife read of one of those "I will not be responsible for debts contracted by my wife" notices in the paper.

"What happened?" telephoned a friend.

"He met a new charmer at our party," was the laconic reply. "She's in—I'm out."

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Research Associates.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Practical aids to American industry are constanly being furnished by the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce through what are known as its research associates. Back in 1901 Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, one of the most outstanding scientists which the country has produced, proposed that Congress enact a law which would throw the bureaus of the government open to the uses of private industry. In connection with his experimentation resulting in the invention of the telephone, Dr. Bell found that the government had information and facilities which could materially assist inventors.

The privilege of using government material lies in the discretion of heads of the various bureaus, but no serious effort for the betterment of some product, although produced by a private corporation, ever is refused.

The list of industries which are being aided in their productive work is a long one. The industries themselves pay the salaries of the research experts but the work is done chiefly in the government's own laboratories. Every important industry has some sort of trade association of which the individual manufacturers or producers are members, paying dues or in some way contributing to the support of the organization. The coal industry, for instance, has an association the members of which are operators. They pay a fraction of a cent on every ton of coal they take from their mines. In this way the distribution of cost is equitable, the big operator paying in proportion to his output and the small one left free from an undue burden. All, however, participate equally in the benefits derived from the research work done on behalf of the organization.

Nor is the privilege of sharing in the benefits of research conducted with the cooperation of the American government confined to organizations of the United States. Foreign associations may participate provided they meet the requirements of the bureau. For instance the Academy of Science Engineers of Stockholm in Sweden is accorded research privileges.

Number Increases Steadily.

When the plan first was adopted in 1901 theer were but ten research associates admitted to the government laboratories. Now there are sixty-one and it seems possible that this number will increase as the industries are coming more and more to realize the value of government assistance.

Typical work of this type includes the study of metallurgy, the welding of railway rails, structural materials in the study of which tensile strength, endurance under water, under changes of temperature, and such matters are tested; textiles, paper, dyes, the ability of various building materials to resist fire, acoustics involving the study of how various buildings materials react to sound waves, radio, automobile fuels, and a host of other things.

One of the especially interesting laboratories of the Bureau of Standards is that in which airplane propellers are tested. The process is called "testing to destruction." There is a building constructed of very heavy materials, usually thick walls and roof.

An airplane motor is set in position in this building and the motor turned on. The researchers stand outside the building and peep through small openings in the walls. By the use of an electric connection they then turn the motor faster and faster. Ultimately the tremendous centrifugal speed causes the propeller to fly to pieces. Were a man inside the building he probably would be killed by the bits of wood flying at immense velocity.

By this test the scientists determine what kinds of wood can stand the greatest centrifugal force, and, in accordance with their findings, recommendations are made for specifications for Army and Navy planes and the data made available to commercial companies.

Another interesting machine is one which tests the strength of steel beams. It is important for structural engineers such as bridge builders and erectors of skyscrappers to know how much pressure can be withstood by a steel beam of given dimensions. The machine consists of two huge pieces of steel connected by a series of powerful screws. The steel beam to be tested is placed endwise between the Approximately 21,000 school children from East Liverpool, Steubenville, Wellsville, Toronto, Midland, Chester, Weirton, Newell and other communities along the Ohio valley will attend the school children's picnic which will be held at Rock Springs Park on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, June 1, 2 and 3.

Pupils from East Liverpool, Wellsville, Chester and Newell probably will be guests at the park on the first three days, while the other two days of the frolic will be given over to visitors from more distant points who will come to the resort in special street cars and probably excursion trains.

Free street car transportation will be provided children from this section to the park while half fare rates will be offered children from Midland, Toronto and other communities. It is believed that a special fare concession will be made for children from Weirton, Steubenville, New Cumberland, more distant points.

The picnic is being sponsored by The Review-Tribune in the local district. Each pupil will be given an identification ticket before school closes for the summer vacation. In the Review-Tribune prior to the outing will be published a strip of tickets, these being accepted as admission on eight riding devices and other attractions at the park on the three picnic days.

The strip tickets will be good on the new $40,000 coaster ride, new $25,000 merry-go-round, Custer car, aero swing, fun house, bathing pool and other attractions.

Strength Sapped By Overwork Rebuilt by Tanlac

Ben Romano broke under long hours and heavy work. On verge of breakdown, tried Tanlac and regained lost vitality. Praises Tanlac highly.

Ben Romano lives at 799 Bowery St., Akron Ohio. A native of Birmingham, Ala., he has a host of friend in that city. While working for the Sloss-Sheffield Iron Company there he spared no effort to succeed, putting all his strength and energy into his work. "Lugging pig iron ten hours a day takes strength and vitality," said Mr. Romano, "and in the end it got me. For three months I was played out, nervous—on the verge of a break down.

"My stomach and liver went back on me, and heartburn, gas and sourness, kept me in constant misery. I could neither eat, sleep nor digest normally, so grew steadily weaker. Shortly before coming to Akron I started on Tanlac and have been in the pink of condition ever since. My friends would congratulate me on my improvement and I would always say that Tanlac and nothing else is responsible for the change. It certainly put an end to my troubles."

"If you feel below par, try Tanlac, nature's own tonic and body builder. Made from barks, roots and herbs. Your druggist has Tanlac. Over 52 million bottles sold.

Beauty You Stop To Look At

If there is anything in this world lovelier than a head of silken-like hair, pronounced in its own color, and wavy, it is an abundance of it.

It is just as easy to have hair like that as to have any at all. It is not always a gift of nature, that is true. But it IS always possible if you keep it clean by brushing it with a few dashes of Danderine. Shampooing alone can not remove the dandruff and that oily film which keeps it dull.

Make it a habit to use a little Danderine on your brush every time you fix your hair, and you will always have soft, lovely, beautiful locks. A million women are doing it, and as fast as those who are still struggling with coarse, dull, lifeless hair, learn about the marvelous things Danderine is doing, they can not keep back their enthusiasm.

Just one thing to be sure of. Use a stiff brush and draw it through the hair with long, even strokes clear to the scalp so each strand becomes alive and glowing. It will help to keep in your waves.

Danderine is so inexpensive, too. The 35c bottle contains enough to show you how wonderful it is. You can get it from your nearest store.

Grim Pyorrhea gets 4 out of 5

All around you are people doomed, through carelessness, to contract Pyorrhea. Four persons out of five past forty (and many younger) are its victims.

Carelessness—neglect of teeth and gums—is the cause. And the results, too often, are loss of teeth, neuritis, rheumatism, or other serious diseases.

And yet, if you start in time, it is so easy to prevent. See your dentist twice a year. And start using Forhan's for the Gums.

Used regularly and in time, Forhan's prevents Pyorrhea or checks it. It firms the gums and keeps them healthy. It protects teeth and keeps them white.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER

"PRESIDENTIAL SPOKESMAN'S" GONE TO AN UNMARKED GRAVE

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The coroner ought to sit on the "presidential spokesman's" remarks.

He snuffed out too suddenly not to be suspicious.

HE was a most useful person, too. The press feels his loss keenly.

As all Washington correspondents know, the president himself mustn't be quoted.

He gives out news but the papers musn't say he said so.

It frequently happens that news isn't much good unless you tell where it comes from.

Suppose the country wants to hear what the president has to say about so-and-so? You ask him. He answers. How are you going to pass his answer on to a waiting world if you can't quote him?

Well, you can't. Or, if you do, it's his recognized privilege to elect you to his Ananias Club. You're "in bad" forever after also.

But you can quote the presidential spokesman."

That is, you always could, during several generations of presidents, until very lately. Not now, however.

AFTER many years' faithful service, there began to be indications, some time ago, that the "spokesman" was falling into disfavor at the White House.

For one thing, it was clear President Coolidge had a hunch the public no longer believed he had any "spokesman."

Then folks got to joshing about him, which made him ridiculous.

In denying that Secretary of State Kellogg was about to resign, he made the perfectly awful mistake of adding that Secretary of Commerce Hoover wouldn't get Kellogg's job, even if Kellogg did quit.

There's the best reason in the world for believing, as the president hastily explained, that the "spokesman" simply meant Hoover was too valuable a secretary of commerce to be transferred to any other department.

Nevertheless, there was no escaping the fact that the "spokesman's" utterance was susceptible to a different interpretation.

IT certainly was so interpreted—that is to say, differently from the way the president says his "spokesman" meant it—in embarrassingly numerous quarters.

The row about it was very considerable. Hoover may have considered it all right, but a lot of his friends didn't.

Shortly afterward word was passed out from the temporary White House to the correspondents that the "presidential spokesman" is no more—he's dead, embalmed, buried and gone, it was strongly intimated the president hopes, to a warmer climate than even Washington in summer.

Henceforward quotations are TABOO—from almost anybody.

WITH a motive for foul play so strongly indicated, surely this is a case for investigation. And yet, what's the coroner to do about it?—without even a "corpus delicti."

Recreation Advantages Make American Billiard Parlors Popular Center

Ten New Brunswick "Medalist" Brand Tables Provide Unsurpassable Facilities for Pool and Billiards; Four Bowling Alleys Always in First Class Condition.

Properly conducted there probably is no greater sport, contest or competition, in whatever light it may be regarded, that tends toward the development of a keener mentality, a steadier hand and eye, a cohesive functioning of all intellects, and operates, as well, to relieve problem laden minds of daily business cares, than the pastime of billiards. It is followed, in its various forms, from coast to coast, from gulf to border and internationally, as well.

Known the world over, where civilization is, it thrives in the metropolitan centers and it is a center of interest in every hamlet and village.

Besides promoting the sport itself through facilities that well may be ranked with the best in this section of the state, the American Billiard Parlors, East Sixth street, also fosters the accompanying spirit of sportsmanship, good fellowship, gentility and the environment that places the game on a plane equal to sports of other characters.

Its followers are legion and justly so. The clubs have their especial room for billiards, the private homes their own tables, but for those who cannot afford the luxury of individually owned accessories of the game, there are the American parlors.

Here they may play on 10 new Brunswick tables, installed as recently as last August. The layout consists of eight pool tables and two for the exclusive use of billiards.

The tables are known as the "Medalist" brand, the latest type of their kind constructed by Brunswick and this name on a green topped table is sufficient guarantee in itself of worthiness.

Like an automobile or a piece of machinery, the characteristics that denote quality serviceability or endurance are not always branded on the surface.

When you play on a "Medalist" you play over a heavy slate foundation on Belgian cloth, the best kind of cloth for the purpose to which it is adapted, and the most expensive.

You don't see the slate, the "backbone," but you know it's there. The results will tell.

And the tables are kept clean, always in excellent condition responding instantly and accurately to the most expert play. There are no "spots" no patches either. Three dozen new cues recently were placed in service as accessory equipment.

On the opposite side of the billiard parlors are located four bowling alleys; these too being always kept in perfect condition—clean, true and well illuminated at all times.

You're certain to get your strikes and spares whenever they're coming to you. It is not necessary to overcome the handicap of imperfect alleys.

The American has been in operation since 1915 when it was first opened by Ted Ganas. For a year it was conducted purely as a billiard parlor.

In 1916, Ganas combined forces with his brothers, Nick and Mike, and the bowling alleys were installed. The same high standard that was set at the beginning has been maintained unceasingly up to the present time.

As an incidental part of the business the Ganas brothers operate also a lunch counter and soda fountain, as well as cigar and tobacco stand.

Interested in baseball to the extent that he is financially backing a team known as the American Billiards in the City Industrial league, Ted Ganas also creates further interest in his establishment through the reception of major and minor league baseball scores, by the inning, over special telegraph apparatus.

ARMS OF MERCY UNIT EXTENDED TO STORM AREA

Steeled by Four-week Struggle in Flood Zone.

SUCCOR VICTIMS

Redouble Efforts to Curb Disaster Along Mississippi.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 11.—The sustaining arms of the American Red Cross, steeled by a four weeks' hand to hand struggle with the devastating Mississippi's floods, were extended today to the wind swept regions of five states spread from Illinois to Texas.

Under plans suggested by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and approved by Red Cross field officers, the two vast areas of death and suffering will be administered through a single relief organization. The existing food relief machinery will be expanded to care for the new hundreds awaiting succor from tornadoes in Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas and Texas.

While the new tornado relief machinery centered at Memphis was getting under way, flood rescue forces in west central Louisiana redoubled their efforts today to curb the disaster in the seven threatened parishes south of the Bayou Des Glaises levee, which is rapidly crumbling under the Arkansas overflow.

Warns of Impending Break.

The Bayou dikes have been water topped for 48 hours. Warnings that a break appeared inevitable have been posted throughout the threatened parishes for a week. Thousands of muscle-sore levee defenders are battling along the 50 miles of wave-washed wall in a last heroic stand against the inexorable sea still swelling over thousands of square miles in northeastern Louisiana. Walking in mud and seepage knee deep in spots, these desperate thousands labor like automatons 24 hours a day in their losing fight to build up the Bayou walls faster than the angry waters damage them.

Because of the stubborn refusal of thousands in the threatened area to heed the evacuation warnings, rescue equipment in the Red and Old rivers has been augmented against the anticipated crevasse in the bayou levees. Six huge barges were hauled up from New Orleans today under emergency orders to stand by with the armada of coast guard vessels, side-wheel packet ships, tankers, and tugs scattered along the two rivers.

Former Governor John M. Parker, in charge of the state relief machinery, believes everything possible has been done to prevent loss of life when the break comes, probably within 48 hours. But as to property loss he gazes intently, almost fiercely at the colored pins in the huge wall map and says earnestly "we're fighting wherever we can set foot. At some spots the leeves are too soft to sustain the men but we're fighting till the jig is up."

Five New Refugee Camp Sites.

Secretary Hoover, accompanied by James L. Feiser, vice chairman of the National Red Cross, arrived from New Orleans last night to confer here today with Parker and Adjutant General Toombs on details of the relief plans formulated against the moment when the jig shall be up. Five new refugee camp sites are ready.

Naval wireless communication is maintaining a constant vigil over the threatened levees. Army and navy planes soared above the fragile barrier which has checked the flood havoc for five days. A break at any point, a flash to relief headquarters in the statehouse here, and a single order will center the entire machinery for rescue into action.

Although the water levels have risen several inches over most of the northern Louisiana flooded area during the last 24 hours no new territory has been inundated north of the Bayou levee line.

The break in the protecting dike at Vidalia had the effect only of opening a new spillway from the Mississippi into an already flooded town. Vidalia, a village of 1500 people directly opposite Natchez, is the parish seat of Concordia parish, which has been virtually submerged since the opening of the main levee near Glasscock last week.

Meterologists placed the crest of the flood today in the vicinity of Natchez, creeping southward at the rate of 15 miles a day. Engineers' reports predicted the crest would reach the mouth of the Old river not later than Friday.

Search for Storm Victims.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., May 11.—Military regulations ruled over the "tornado area," today as the well-organized armies of rescue workers methodically continued the task of searching for bodies in the ruins of Monday's twister.

The recovered dead totaled 79 today with the possibility several more victims would be found in the debris. The injured numbered more than 250 and about 10 of this number were so badly hurt they may die.

Mayor John W. Barcyman and other officials who have been directing rescue work agreed that the death toll would reach 100 or more.

Red Cross Flood Relief Fund Hits $10,120,783 Mark

WASHINGTON, May 11. — The Red Cross flood relief fund reached $10,120,783 today.

Officials said that additional money would be needed to care properly for Mississippi valley refugees, and the drive will be pressed vigorously.

State's Youngest Convicted Murderer Goes to Death Cell

COLUMBUS, O., May 11. — Ohio's state penitentiary had within its walls one of the state's youngest convicted murderers to be sent to the chair—Floyd Hewitt, 16-year-old Conneaut lad, convicted on April 26 of slaying Fred Brown, Jr., 5, Conneaut.

800 MARINES GO TO NICARAGUA

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The first contingent of 800 additional marines ordered to Nicaragua for police duty sailed today from Quantico, Va., aboard the U. S. S. Aroostook. There were 130 in the party.

The Aroostook will pick up 45 marines at Hampton Roads and 100 at Charleston, S. C.

Counsel for Sacco And Vanzetti Makes Move for Clemency

BOSTON, May 11.—Attorney William G. Thompson, counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, convicted of slaying a paymaster and his guard, today called at the home of Governor Alvan Fuller. It was understood that Thompson was to discuss with the governor seven affidavits alleged that the trial before Judge Webster Thayer was prejudiced against Sacco and Vanzetti because they were radicals.

It was rumored that the governor was to announce whether he would let the death sentence stand or review it by a public commission. The governor's secretary, Herman Macdonald, stated, however, that no decision would be forthcoming today.

Buffalo Salesman Acquitted by Jury Of Girl's Death

ERIE, Pa., My 11.—Karl Bechtel, Buffalo salesman, was acquitted by a jury in Erie county today of murder charges in connection with the death of Virginia Gibney, Philadelphia chorus girl, who died in a hotel here in March.

The jury's verdict of "not guilty" was directed by Judge U. P. Rossiter, who said the district attorney had offered no evidence that would prove Bechtel caused the girl's death.

A coroner's jury had found the girl died from natural causes, but the district attorney ordered Bechtel held for trial when the latter admitted he choked Miss Gibney during a quarrel a few hours before her death.

GREGORY'S BAND AT PARK TONIGHT

BAKERY FIRE COSTS $2,000

F. W. Miller Shop, Green Lane, Damaged by Blaze.

Fire, believed to have started from a leaking gas pipe, caused damage estimated at $2,000 to the F. W. Miller bakery, in Green Lane, at 2:15 o'clock this morning. The loss is said to have been covered by insurance.

The fire broke out in a dressing room, which adjoins a small compartment, used in "raising" the bread before it is placed in the ovens. Herman Peterson and Harold Peterson, brothers, and Ernest Carroll, bakers, lost their clothing which was kept in the room. Herman Peterson also lost $66 in money, which he had in his pockets while his brother lost $5 in money and a wrist watch. Carroll's loss in money, in addition to his clothes, was $15.

Firemen from the Central station used two lines of hose in extinguishing the blaze which had eaten its way through a sky light and into the roof directly above the ovens. The ovens were not damaged, but a $300 stock of bread, together with flour and other materials, was rendered a total loss.

Miller will re-open as soon as temporary repairs can be made to the roof of the establishment.

Nicaraguan Rebel Chief's Agent Asks Meet With Sheffield

MEXICO CITY, May 11.—Dr. Pedro Zepeda, Mexican representative of Juan Sacasa, leader of the Nicaraguan Liberals, today requested an interview with American Ambassador Sheffield to propose that the United States invite some Latin-American republic to share the responsibility of supervising the Nicaraguan general election next year.

(One of the proposals made by Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's representative in Nicaragua, was that the United States supervise the Nicaraguan election in 1928).

At the United States embassy no information was forthcoming as to whether Dr. Zepeda would be received.

GERMAN monarchists and imperialists that would welcome back the Hohenzollerns had a parade with iron helmets, four sons of the ex-kaiser joining in the procession. Their chance of recovering the throne their father lost would be better if one or two of them had been killed, or at least wounded, when the fighting was on. The Hohenzollern miracle that made the former kaiser one man in Germany with half a dozen sons of fighting age, all coming out of the war without a scratch, can't be a very popular miracle.

DEATH ROLL

Robert Andrew Seeckman.

Robert Andrew, 14 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Seeckman, died last night in the home, West Eighth street.

Funeral services will be held in the home at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, in charge of Rev. F. A. Dean, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church. Burial will be made in Spring Grove cemetery.

Urge New Fire Station

must cover all portions of the city and thus leave the high value district unprotected for extended periods.

"Colpled with these conditions are the discontinuance of inspections by the firemen, the absence of drills, total lack of ladder service for rescue work, an unreliable pumping engine, deficient small equipment, the poor condition of nearly all of the hose, poor repair facilities and inadequate fire stations. The resultant of all these features is a condition bordering on almost no fire defense for the city; in some sense the false sense of security offered by maintaining a fire department of this character is a detriment as it delays the calling on citizens to volunteer their aid for a serious fire which in the ultimate analysis must be the main dependence for protection to the high value districts."

Building Code Suggested.

Other recommendations are:

That the emergency connection between the high and low service reservoirs be equipped with a suitable automatic regulating valve to allow the high service line to maintain pressures when the normal low service drops to 20 pounds.

That all water mains 10 inches and over in diameter be tested and those found with reduced carrying capacity be cleaned.

That all hose be tested at least once a year to 250 pounds pressure and if found defective, be taken out of service.

That a ladder truck and pumper be immediately placed in service at headquarters.

That a building code be enacted conforming to modern requirements for construction and fire prevention.

That a complete code of regulations governing the manufacture, sale, storage and transportation of explosives and inflammables be adopted by ordinance and the chief of the fire department be held solely responsible for its enforcement and the keeping of records.

Water Mains "Tuberculated."

That an ordinance be adopted requiring all electrical work to be in accordance with the national electrical code.

That automatic sprinkler equipments with outside Siamese hose connections and controlling valve near main in street, be required in all buildings which by reason of their size, construction or occupancy, singly or combined, might act as conflagration breeders.

In touching upon the city's water supply it is pointed out that many of the mains are "badly tuberculated" and that an excessive amount of small pipe has been used. Fire hydrants are widely spaced and many of them are too small. The number of fire hydrants in use on December 31, 1926, was 286. The total mileage of water main service is 50.69 miles. 38 per cent of which is four-inch pipe 24 per cent six-inch, 11 per cent eight inch, seven per cent 10-inch, 10 per cent 12-inch, three per cent 16-inch and four per cent 20-inch.

The report carries a complete description of the motor equipment used by the fire department. Speaking of the No. 1 station, located on St. Clair avenue and Broadway, the report says: It is "an exposed frame structure in very poor condition of repair and it is totally unfitted for fire department purposes." The down town and East End stations are in need of plaster, paint and repairs, it is declared.

Condition of Garages.

The fire alarm system is also reviewed in the report. Fire alarm boxes are well distributed in the mercantile section but poorly located in other sections. In case of serious conflagration outside help could be secured from Chester, Salem, Pittsburgh and Akron, the report says.

While the city has a building permit ordinance, the form is "general and indefinite." "No inspection is made of building construction exception upon complaint of any interested individual, in which case an inspection is made and, if necessary, the matter is referred to the proper municipal or state authority," the report adds.

The condition of garages was from fair to very poor, the investigators say. One is fireproof, another fireproof except for roof and the rest, in or near the mercantile district, are of brick joisted construction with concrete floors. Cellars and business houses as a rule were orderly and fairly clean. Alleys were free from accumulations and inflammable rubbish. The packing rooms of nearby potteries are in poor condition.

The fire district covers 21 acres, being irregular in shape, averaging two blocks wide by three blocks long and containing nine blocks and part blocks. Most of the potteries where fire hazards exist are protected with automatic sprinklers.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 11.—Financial interest was largely centered on the railroad stocks and the prospects for the Nickel Plate consolidation at the beginning of trading today.

The new $48,000,000 bond offering of the Chesapeake corporation, a holding corporation for the Van Sweringen accumulation of Chesapeake and Ohio stock, met with an enthusiastic reception, the bonds jumping 3 points to 97 in the first period of trading on the stock exchange. Nickel Plate stock sold up about 6 points as the result of the favorable interpretation of the progress of the hearing now being conducted in Washington relative to the consolidation of this road with Pere Marquette, Chesapeake and Ohio, Erie and subsidiary roads into the proposed new eastern trunk system.

A few of the motor and utility stocks spurted to moderately higher price levels at the start of the session, but met with considerable liquidation and short selling at the higher rangers. Hudson Motors carried its advance to 87 1-2, up 4 points, while Consolidated Gas sold in volume above 101. The steel stocks were firm, with "New" U. S. Steel common above 123. This will be the only form of stock quoted after May 31.

The renewal rate on call money was marked down fractionally to 4 1-4 per cent. Commodity markets were irregular, with cotton down about 10 points, New York wheat up half a cent and Chicago grain fractionally lower. Weather conditions in the agricultural districts were generally favorable.

A large audience witnessed the afternoon performance. The opening spectacle was a pageant of unexcelled beauty—a veritable fairyland. More than 400 people and 300 animals take part in this beautiful vision of the "land of make-believe." The prima donna has a wonderful voice and could be heard above the strains of the augmented concert band of 32 instruments. A fortune alone is invested in the wardrobe of this part of the two-hour performance.

Performance Moves Rapidly.

Under the skilled hands of the director the performance moves rapidly. The aerialists, gathered from all parts of the old and new world, caused many a spectator to hold their breath. The riders, in their beautiful costumes, glittering with spangles, were a revelation to the circus loving populace. The elephants danced and cavorted to the delight of the happy audience. The gymnasts and acrobats, among whom many nations are represented, performed marvelous feats of strength and dexterity.

The dancers of the tight wire, the mid-air horizontal bar artists, the shapely girls on the swinging ladders and hanging by their teeth high up in the big tent—all held the audience enthralled by their feats of skill and daring.

And the clowns—bless 'em—what would the circus be without the clowns! At intervals, during the two-hour show they appear from all sections of the big tent without the slightest warning. Their burlesques are immense, their stunts are hilarious and their costumes are so grotesque that they would cause "Old Man Gloom," himself, to shake with laughter.

Performers Born To Arena.

Nearly all of the circus performers have been literally born to the arena. Some of them represent the third and fourth generations of famous circus families. The boys and girls are a modest, healthy, honest party of playmates whose parents find time each day to hear lessons and give advice in manners and morals.

The "mother" is one of the most interesting characters of the circus. Her life is devoted particularly to the welfare of the women performers. Her official duty is that of matron of the dressing rooms. She it is who supervises their wardrobe, mends sudden breaches in the tarlatan and bespangled skirts and cares for her charges in case of illness or accident.

A pretty and pleasant and picturesque part of the daily life under the "white tops" comes after the substantial meal at 5 o'clock, when for two hours there is rest for all save the hard-worked people of the side show, or annex. The women performers, busy with sewing or fancy work; the men talking over the evenis of the day; the children playing among themselves; the horses silently munching their hay in the horse tents, form a charming picture.

Suddenly the shrill shriek of a whistle, a scampering to dressing rooms, ushers and ticket takers in their places, and the evening audience pours into the big tents.

Tents Seat 5,000 People.

The Walter L. Main circus is a mighty achievement of clean amusement. Built upon a foundation of quality, honesty and cleanliness, it was organized in 1879, this making its 48th trans-continental tour. No enterprise, large or small, not builded upon a foundation could have survived almost a half a century.

The waterproof tents comfortably seat 5,000 people and another performance will be given at 8 o'clock this evening. The doors will open one hour earlier in order that all patrons will have a full hour in which to visit the large double menagerie or to listen to the concert by Prof. Griffin's Military Band.

Immediately after the evening performance the loading of the special train of two sections will begin and the circus will depart for the city where it will exhibit tomorrow.

SENATE PASSES MYERS BILL

Upper Branch Also Overrides Veto of Lewis Measure.

COLUMBUS, O., May 11.—Republican senators in caucus here today voted to recess until May 31 when sine die adjournment of the present legislature will be subject to approval by the house of representatives.

COLUMBUS, O., May 11. — By a vote of 20 to 9, the Ohio senate today concurred in the action of the house in passing the Myers bill increasing the state's excise tax on gross premiums of foreign insurance companies from 2½ to 3 per cent. The bill goes to the governor.

The senate today passed the Lewis budget bill over Gov. Vic Donahey's veto by a vote of 29 to 5. The bill, which goes to the house, authorizes the governor to order heads of state departments to keep expenditures within appropriations made by the state legislature.

The senate recessed shortly before noon and the Republican senators went into caucus at the request of Senator C. C. Bolton, Cleveland, Republican floor leader.

It was understood that the caucus was for the purpose of determining whether the legislature should adjourn sine die, or arrange for a recess, and, also, to decide what action, if any, should be taken relative to the governor's request for confirmation of his appointment of Attorney Chalmers Parker, Columbus, Republican, to a six-year term as a member of the state utilities commission, succeeding Frank E. Maullar, Republican, Chillicothe.

Some Republican senators, it was understood, urged that the legislature provide for an extended recess in order to prevent the governor from carrying out this threat to call the solons back in special session if they fail to pass the Chappelear-Herbert election reform bill, and to thwart any plans the governor might have to designate Parker as a "recess" appointee, if the legislators adjourned sine die.

House Republicans participated in an extended caucus this forenoon. It was reported that they were considering what act should be taken by the house on the question of concurring in the action of the senate in passing measures over the governor's veto.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear father, Gustave A. Hayberg, who departed from this life one year ago today, May 11th, 1926.

This day brings sad memories of a loved one gone to rest,
May Jesus bless him in his loving way,
We are lonely yet not alone,
For Jesus speaks with loving tones,
And bids us wipe those tears away,
And follow him from day to day.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., May 11—Henry Judd Gray wants to see his former sweetheart, Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder—"just once, to say good-bye."

He made this plea to prison guards who had told him of the collapse of Mrs. Snyder in her cell.

"I'm sorry she has taken the verdict so hard," said Gray. "I didn't tell my story on the stand to make her suffer. I simply told the truth, and I feel better. I don't see why I can't see her just once again."

Prison officials said today that Gray may be given a chance to see Mrs. Snyder after they are sentenced next Monday by Justice Townsend Scudder to death in the electric chair for the murder of Albert Snyder. This opportunity will come just before they are driven in separate automobiles to Sing Sing immediately after sentence is pronounced.

Mrs. Snyder Resting Better.

Mrs. Snyder, who had been in a semi-hysterical condition since her conviction, was resting better this morning and hope was expressed that she will soon regain the poise she maintained throughout her trial. A special guard has been assigned to watch her, however, to see that she does not try to commit suicide.

Physicians believe she is not now suffering from epilepsy but merely from a severe case of hysteria. They attributed her recurring attacks of hysteria to the reaction from the strain on her nerves during the trial.

Her chance of escaping the electric chair on a plea of insanity became more remote today as her condition improved. She will be carefully examined as to her mental condition next Tuesday after her arrival at the deathhouse in Sing Sing. Her recovery is expected to be constant from now on.

Gray, meanwhile, is fully reconciled to his fate. He talks amiably, even volubly, to his guards as he paces his five-by-nine cell in Queens county jail. He apparently is reveling in his approaching doom, clutching at it as a means of expiation of his crime.

He has received a letter of sympathy from his wife, Mrs. Isabelle Gray, who plans to visit him on Friday. She has not seen her husband since the Tuesday after the murder of Snyder, more than seven weeks ago.

Counsel for Mrs. Snyder said they would not base their appeal from the verdict on her illness. They said the appeal will be made chiefly on the ground that improper evidence was admitted against their client. Attorneys for Gray will appeal on the same ground.

South of the Atlas

BY MARSHALL P. HALL
AUTHOR OF "THE VALLEY OF STONE" AND "RIDDLE OF THE CIRCLE" ETC.

SYNOPSIS:

LARRY GRENFALL, American, traveler and student of Eastern occultism receives a telephone call from BEN MANSOUR, cosmopolite and old friend, saying he must see him immediately.

GILES, Mansour's servant, drives him to his old friend's house. He seems afraid of an attack and arms Grenfall with a revolver. The curtains are drawn back and two turbanned heads are seen. Giles fires at them. The car comes to a halt, the turbanned figures get away, Larry starts the car and they arrive at Mansour's house.

While the two friends talk they see a face appear at the window which Mansour throws open and a Moor steps into the room. As a token he hands Mansour a ring set with a huge ruby. Mansour accepts it and throws it carelessly on the table.

CHAPTER THREE.

"I am commanded by the Group to speak to you, moulay, offering you the choice of resuming your sheriffdom, joining Moulay Edrisss by your own hand, or joining him—" He paused, significantly, the while his beady, black eyes blazed into those of Mansour.

"And if I choose to appoint another to honor my throne?" Mansour's voice was calm despite the fact that he had just heard a sinister death threat. Larry interpreted the invitation to join Moulay Edriss in the only way it could be construed — Moulay Edriss had been dead these many decades, and to join him could mean only that one must die.

"Ai, my lord," the other made response. "There is no other who may take your place, save only he whom the Group may select after you." He paused again, leaving the sinister thought unuttered.

"Now, by the beard of the Prophet," Mansour roraed, his eyes flashing, his lean form straightening. "Am I a jackal of the hills, scouring for the filth of the tribal camps, that I must endure insolence from you, dog? Son of all that is vile, offspring of a thousand swine, go back to the Group, go back to the Atlas and take this word: The next sherif of the Seven Tribes will be my son. Go!"

Larry started violently. Ben Mansour with a son? Before he could pursue his thoughts further, he heard the Moor again:

"Moulay must know that the answer will not satisfy; that in carrying it back I am not performing fully the mission I came here on. There is still in hand the business of—"

"Killing me," interrupted Mansour, impatiently. "Well, begone, for I have anticipated you and three hours ago I swallowed karas. Is that sufficient for you?"

The other immediately made a low obsequy.

"You swear that you swallowed—?"

"I have told you," granted Mansour, and he pointed toward the window.

Larry, watching, in that instant sensed that Mansour was a Moor! And unless the signs were awry, he was high in the councils of his country. He had often suspected the man's nationality, but nothing Mansour had ever said or done had verified the suspicion; rather he had always intimated that he was what Larry first had taken him to be on the occasion of their initial meeitng, in the French Club at Fez—a well-to-do Englishman, touring for pleasure.

Dully, he watched the man of the turban step through the window, saw him turn and toss something inside, where it struck the floor with a cound like a hailstone striking a dry leaf. Mansour closed the window and picked up the thing the messenger had thrown back. Carelessly, he tossed it to Larry and the latter, catching it, turned it curiously in his fingers.

It was a tiny ivory replica of a tiger, its claws distended and its body crouched ominously!

"What is it, Ben?" asked Larry, a feeling on him that he was wandering through the vague shadows of a dream.

"An image of the Striped Death," the other answered. He was looking at Larry with tired eyes, a lazy smile on his face.

"You heard, Larry?"

Grenfall nodded.

"I'm damned if this isn't first rate stuff for a comic opera, Ben. The only thing lacking was that you did not draw an automatic and either kill that Moor, or chase him for dear life out into the storm. Old man, if I didn't know better, I'd swear I was in Morocco this blessed minute, somewhere high in the Berber hills of the Atlas. Tell me before I perish with curiosity, what, in the name of Allah, does it all mean?"

Mansour looked at the tiny clock.

"Time has flown," he said gently, his voice soft and mellow again. "It is nearly one-thirty. Well, I have slightly more than a half hour in which to talk, but before I explain, I to ask you a question: Will you do something for me that may endanger your very life?"

Despite the incongruity of the thing—for that matter fo this whole baushee night—Larry replied, instantly:

"Need you ask, my friend?"

Mansour's strong lean hand dropped over the bronzed muscular fingers of Larry and there was something in his touch that hinted somehow of renunciation and the great love of one man for another.

"Will you go to Morocco for me, Larry? Will you go into the Atlas, find the Temple, endure the Ordeal if need be and crush the Group? Will you recover at all costs a casket that is hidden in the Temple and give it to a man I shall name?"

Larry gazed anxiously into his friend's face, endeavoring to read what was in it.

"I am not mad, dear friend; I never was saner, never more serious than I am at this moment."

"I don't understand a thing you have said, Ben Mansour, but if it will help you or ease your mind, I promise that I shall do all I can to carry out any wishes you may have. But, tell me, why?"

"Because," Mansour's voice was low and husky, "unless Omar ben Medjad has in his possession the casket on the eve of the mouloud, a most wonderful boy will lose his birthright."

Larry pondered. The mouloud, he knew, was the anniversary of the birth of the Prophet, but for the life of him he could not understand Mansour—neither his mood nor what he was hinting at.

"Who is Omar Medjad, and where shall I find him?" he asked.

"He is a shop keeper in a side street that leads from the market place in Ab Dukkar. You will go to Ab Dukkar first and you will find in the street a Doukala mendicant, crying for alms. Ask him the way to Omar's and trust him, for he will be faithful."

"But where is this Temple?" Larry queried, desperately. "What is the Ordeal and what is in the casket? Oh, damn it, man, can't you see what a superlative mystery you are tonight, and what a superlative riddle your words are? At least, tell me if your son is the 'most wonderful boy' you have just—" he broke off, staring at Mansour, over whose face a great change had come on the instant. His eyes were growing heavy and dull and a pallor was spreading across his dark, handsome face. With an effort, he roused himself, briefly, and smiled wanly, lazily it seemed, at Larry.

"Too late—can't talk more—going—open chest—remember mendicant—Omar—boy—Temple—I'm sleep —

Larry caught his friend, in time to save him from pitching forward into the fire. Gently he laid him back on the divan and grasped the untasted brandy peg Mansour had left. But already the man's teeth were clenched and his staring eyes glazed. He was breathing so faintly that his chest movements were not visible. Larry glanced instnictively at the clock. It was two minutes until two!

Raising his voice, he summoned Giles, who appeared almost on the instant fully clothed, as though he had like a faithful watch-dog, been sleeping just beyond the door, on guard. One glance at Mansour, and Giles wailed.

"That's what 'e meant, sir, when 'e said I was to take my orders from you this mornin'. My Lor', sir, they've poisoned 'im. 'E told me once this might 'appen anytime and that if it did I was not to worry, but was to hopen 'is trunk the very minute I was sure 'e was gone. 'E said there was letters there I must take care of."

The clock chimed twice, mellow, musically. Larry, sensing it was exactly two, felt his friend's forehead and found it cold. His hand fumbled across Ben Mansour's chest, but could detect no heartbeat. He turned to Giles.

"Oepn the trunk and fetch the letters, then, Giles. Our friend, the man we both loved, is dead."

He dropped on his knees beside the body, his eyes filmed with unshed tears, and a short Berber prayer flitted through his mind. Kneeling thus, he uttered it above his dead friend:

"Merahba bi Koum."

Then in English:

"Heaven be with you."

two pieces and then the screws are tightened by the application of power. The machine is capable of applying the equivalent of 2,300,000 pounds pressure. The investigators watch the experiment and determine with instruments of percision at what point the beam buckles and loses its rigidity.

Many Different Mills.

The Bureau of Standards also has a textile mill for the making of yarns, a paper mill, a cement mill, an elaborate clay products factory which can produce anything from rough brick to the finest porcelain, manufactories for chemicals, for sugar, and for rubber goods, and a tannery. Every process of manufacture is carefully studied by the experts in charge and reports are prepared on the results. When some new sort of material or some new process of manufacture is developed, the research associates go to some commercial manufacturer and make arrangements to try out the new wrinkle in an actual factory. This is to determine whether or not the process of material can be made commercially to advantage.

Then, too, the Bureau has what are called its technical shops. These include a glass blowing shop, one for grinding optical lenses, one for the testing of time pieces, and, of course, an extensive electrical shop where experts constantly study this mysterious force.

The Bureau has a library of 28,000 volumes. They are all of a highly technical nature and to the average reader would doubtless prove rather dull and abstruse, but the scientist can find the most authoritative reference books which have been printed here or in other countries on every scientific subject. In addition to its own library, the Bureau can provide for the use of the research associates any book in the collection of three million in the Library of Congress. The 250,000 volumes in the Public Library of Washington also are available.

The practical use of the public of this research work can be guessed from such facts as that $15,000,000 a year has ben saved from brake lining investigations, $40,000,000 a year from study of the lasting qualities of rubber tires and no less than $100,000,000 a year from research into motor fuels.

The Bureau now is working on a new kind of sugar. It is called levulose and is declared to have a much higher content of sweet than any other type of sugar. It is made by a process discovered by the Bureau from the artichoke and the dahlia.

The Bureau's staff not infrequently is interfered with by the demands of pricate industry. Experts developed in the Bureau often are offered positions paying several times the relatively meagre salaries the government allows. Two states, Alabama and Virginia, have bespoken the cooperation of the Bureau in instructing newly appointed superintendents of weights and measures in the technical intricacies of their duties.

NATURE RENEWS LIFE IN THE SPRING

No Need for You to Drag Around Half Sick Now World's Tonic Will Put You Up to Enjoyment of Life

Thousands of people are miserable every Spring. They think they have "Spring fever," and many of them have come to believe they must go through just so much misery every Spring.

Now what ail people like this is that their blood is full of poison, which in turn has come from the colds, confinements and rich foods of winter. Often the colds leave an inflammation of the membranes of the nose and throat that developes into catarrh. Such people feel tired all the time. They want to hang around the fire and bask in the sun. Their food doesn't taste good, and they haven't any energy.

Cheer up, old friend! What you need is a good medicine that will do three things: First, clear out your system, helping nature to get rid of all waste. Second, purify your blood and help nature enrich it. Third, correct the catarrhal condition before it gets serious.

Thousands of people depend on World's Tonic every Spring. With it they literally make themselves over, recovering energy, getting rich blood that fills them with ambition, and stores up an abundance of the vim and zest that make life worth living.

Don't drag around any more. Get a bottle of World's Tonic at Carnahan's, also Brannon, Wellsville or of any reliable druggist. You will never regret the dollars it costs you. (272)

DIRECT LEVY CAUCUS TOPIC

Assembly Also May Increase Tax on Insurance Companies.

COLUMBUS, May 11.—Proposals that the Ohio legislature enact a direct state tax levy of six-tenths of one mill, half of it collectable next December and half in June, 1928, and increase the state tax on all insurance companies one-half of one percent were reported under consideration by Republican senators and house members in separate caucuses.

These proposals, it was stated, comprised the recommendations made by a special joint committe of ten, as a proposed legislative program designed to wipe out the deficit in the state treasury. It was estimated that it would provide for increased revenue approximating at least $10,000,000 annually.

Members of the joint committee stated that the suggestion that a law be enacted levying a tax upon jobbers and wholesaler dealers in cigarettes was rejected by the committee.

The senate convened this morning but immediately recessed and the Republican senators went into caucus. A brief session of the house preceded the caucus of Republican house members.

It was reported that the senate caucus, by a vote of 19 to 14, endorsed the proposal to levy a six-tenths direct state tax, and decided, by a vote of 21 to 13, to recede from the senate amendment to the Sullivan gas tax increase bill, which provided for reducing the state license fee on pleasaure autos 50 per cent.

During its session this morning, the house reconsidered the vote by which it had concurred in the senate amendment to the Sullivan bill and then, by a vote of 3 yeas to 112 nays, rejected the senate amendment and asked for consideration of the matter by a joint conference committee.

By a vote of 39 to 71, the house rejected a motion that the house suspend its rules and reconsider the vote by which it had defeated the Ott teachers' tenure bill.

NEWS FROM TOWNS IN TRI-STATE DISTRICT

Farmers Co-operating in Cleanup Campaign in Two Counties.

More than 99 per cent of the farmers of Mahoning and Columbiana counties are cooperating with the government to the fullest extent in the corn borer clean up campaign, according to a statement issued by H. O. Brown, New Springfield, supervisor for the two counties. Brown based his statement upon local inspectors' reports. Reports from the 42 Ohio counties in the infested area show that 90 to 95 per cent of the farmers are cooperating, and it is expected that this fight will be raised as the campaign progresses.

All but one of the townships in Mahoning county were completed last week. The one remaining and all of Columbiana county will be completed this week, according to Brown. Wet weather has retarded plowing in many cases and thus necessitated more time for completion of the clean-up. Inspectors report that the few farmers who were at first inclined to refuse to clean up or were indifferent, have since reported their willingness to cooperate. It is expected that there will be little for the federal department to do in the way of cleaning up.

The enforcement work on these few farms will begin next week, according to Brown. The seven stubble beaters now in operation in the two counties will be used as well as four large tractor plows. Laborers will be employed to pick up and burn stalks from the fields and around buildings and feed lots. Local men will be employed if possible to get enough laborers. The government pays 52c per hour for this work.

Persons wishing employment must file an application card with Brown; however, application cards can be secured at the county agent's offices or through the local inspectors. Where the farmer does the work, compensation up to $2.00 per acre will be allowed for extra work required, but where the government cleans up, the cost will be charged to the owner.

Demurrer Overruled.

The court has overruled the demurrer of the plaintiff to the answer of the defendant in the case of Mary M. Callen against John J. Batzli. In this case, which was filed Sept. 9th last, the court was asked to marshal leins and sell real estate to satisfy claims against the defendants.

Court Decree Issued.

A decree quieting title has been handed down by Judge W. F. Lones in common pleas No. 1 in the case of C. F. Cope and others against John Murray and others. Here's Real Relief From the Torturing Pains of Neuritis

Men and Women Everywhere Seldom Fail To Get Quick Relief From Pain and Suffering

When you've tried everything you can think of and nothing seems to even relieve those piercing, agonizing pains, just go to some good druggist and get a bottle of Allenrhu Special Formula No. 2. Be sure you get No. 2 which comes in capsule form.

Take these little dark green capsules as directed and notice how in about 24 hours they have considerably reduced, it not entirely banished those persisting nerve racking pains that have caused you many sleepless nights.

While this particular formula was compounded for the purpose of conquering painful, Gouty conditions and what is known as Rheumatoid Arthritis—a knotty, painful swelling of the joints—it has proven wonderfully successful in most forms of Neuritis and Sciatic Nerve Pains.

You needn't be afraid of its containing dope of any kind—it doesn't. Such things are only makeshifts and can at the best give only partial relief.

Recreation Clubs Get Off To Good Start In Opening Season

First Round Games Marked By Hitting Of All League Nines

Pitchers Find Going Rough as Defense Accustoms Itself to Handling 12-inch Sphere; Home Run Socks Enliven Pastime.

With three more games last night the Review-Tribune Recreation league completed its first section of play, bringing every club in the circuit into action in their opening contests.

Pen and pencil have been laid aside for the bat and the boys are tossing the 12-inch ball by way of diversion from the bench and jigger.

Enthusiasm that has marked the contests for the first half of the week as well as the innumerable practice tilts prior indicates a successful campaign.

The league will be hard on its pitchers, as seen in the heavy hitting proclitivies of the various clubs. However, when infields and out-gardeners tighten up after becoming accustomed to the handling of the larger pellet, the base hits that have been crashing off the bats these days probably will dwindle away considerably.

The Johannes Drugs defeated the Workingman's store, 17 to 11, last night at West End. Ernest Bucher and R. Todd starred with the stick, each collecting four safe drives.

A seventh inning rally that netted them six runs for the one frame gave the Bulger Drugs a 14 to 10 decision over the Y. M. C. A. nine at the Northside. Paul White, with four drives, one a homer, and Bromby, with three bingles, were the chief batters for the winners, while Clark, with two hits, a triple and a homer, and "Doc" Bloor with three starred for the "Y." Clark's homer, in the ninth with two on, started a rally for the "Y" which, however, failed to tie it up.

The Review-Tribune cracked out 19 safe bingles to win from the East End Laughlin club, 18 to 9, at Klondyke. Home run socks were registered by Mackey of the winners and Third Baseman Boyd of the Laughlin nine.

The Laughlin nine rallied sharply in the eighth to score six runs but the newspaper outfit's lead was too big to overcome.

LAUGHLIN WINS, 4 TO 2, FROM K. T. K.

Ashe Holds McCoy's Revamped Club to Three Bingles.

Another elongated twirler by the name of Ashe, no relative, however, of the 1926 Ashe of Laughlin, held the strongly reinforced K. T. K. aggregation to three safe swats and carried the Newell tossers to their second consecutive City Industrial League victory last evening at Columbian park. The final score was 4 to 2.

He blanked his opponents for five innings. But the Katies bunched two passed balls, two errors and a couple of passes in the fifth to prevent a shutout. At the bat he contributed two sacrifices in two appearances and his second made possible a run. Catcher Renaldi's attempt to go to third in his first try possibly prevented another tally, Renaldi being nipped at the hot corner as he tried to take the extra base.

Ashe had speed in plenty and a hook that was effective. Twice he fanned Simcox and thrice retired the Ohio potters in a row.

But good as Ashe's twirling feat was, his team doubtlessly would have had tough sledding to come through had not Myers, in the first frame, after making a magnificent stop of Finley's hard drive, thrown high to Fisher with a double play in sight.

A timely double by Babb then produced three runs and a lead that never was overcome. After that, barring the fifth, Sanders, the Katy hurler, had affairs pretty well in hand.

K. T. K. appeared a revamped club with a scintillating infield consisting of Hayes, Fisher, Montgomery and Myers. They flashed a couple of double putout during the engagement. The garden trio boasted an all star cast in McShane, Simcox and Merchant.

On the hilltop was Sanders, a flinger formerly of Salem, who breezed them to Hunselman with a zip that allowed five hits and no player making the second one off his delivery. He also made one of the trio of swats his club had off Ashe, the blow driving in the first run.

Catcher Renaldi, of Laughlin, impressed those who had not previously seen him as did Grimm at second.

Fisher accepted six of seven chances at second and Montgomery five at short, looming for the day as a Peckinpaugh-Harris combination in keystone territory.

O'FARRELL SATISFIED

Believes he Did Very Well in Trades With M'Graw.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, May 11.—It used to be the notion that John McGraw never gave anybody anything except possibly a punch on the nose but that was long ago when a nose seldom asserted itself and really didn't care who hit it, anyhow. Today, a lot of citizens know that that doesn't go for McGraw any more and one of them is Bob O'Farrell, the new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Robert didn't exactly say so but the writer feels that he can speak for him in gratefully acknowledging the receipt of the following items: One second baseman who is playing the game of his life; one right fielder, now the best in the league; one dependable catcher without whom the Cards might have gotten along very poorly, if at all. Our Mr. McGraw was the donor.

In discussing the matter of philanthropy today, mostly McGraw's, O'Farrell took occasion not to deny the contention that he wouldn't trade Southworth for Roush nor Snyder for the entire staff of Giant catchers nor return Frisch to the Giants for Hornsby, even up at that, he wouldn't affirm the Frisch-Hornsby notion, either, being diplomatic enough to realize that one man's praise is another's pain in the thorax.

"I'm satisfied," was his only comment on the deal that gave the Giants the league's leading hitter and the Cardinals the outstanding individual performer of the campaign to date. "Frisch is an absolute stand-out in the field, at the plate and on the bases. As much as any faction I can think of. He is the reason we are up there in front today. It won't be long until St. Louis forgets about Hornsby and that's hard to do.

"As I see it, both are great ball players. I have one, McGraw has the other."

He laughed when I asked whether he would untrade the pair, so to speak, if given the chance. It was not a question that a smart manager would answer, one way or the other. However, it is nobody's secret that the Cards couldn't hope to get as much out of Hornsby now as they are getting out of Frisch. After what happened in St. Louis last winter. In fact, Hornsby was more of a leader and less of a ball player last year, anyhow.

O'Farrell had no particular theory to account for the sudden miraculous effectiveness of Haines, Alexander, Sherdell and Rhem, the first all-star staff of pitchers to be developed anywhere in some years. He seemed to think it might be that the young men always were good, anyhow. The writer tried to make him confess that he had connived toward the success of the pitchers but the boy was modest and wouldn't take anything except a formal bow.

COBB GIVEN OVATION AS MACKS WIN

By Less Conklin.

NEW YORK, May 11.—With Ty Cobb and Al Simmons back in harness, the Philadelphia Athletics are bowling smoothly along the road to pennantville today after a disastrous start in the west. What these two sluggers mean to Connie Mack was demonstrated in yesterday's game at Detroit. In their first appearance following their suspension, Cobb walloped a double and Simmons hit a single. Two runs came in and the A's went on to win by a score of 6 to 3, Philadelphia advancing to third place and Detroit dropping to fourth.

A roaring welcome by Detroit fans marked Cobb's return in an alien uniform to the scenes of his early triumphs. The celebration resembled a national political convention, a bargain sale and old home week all rolled into one, and Ty was presented with an automobile.

The hitting of Ruth and Gehrig enabled the Yankees to nose out the Browns, 8 to 7, and retain their two game lead. The Babe hit his seventh homer of the season, tying Gehrig, and Gehrig drove in the winning run.

The White Sox jumped to second place when Tommy Thomas personally conducted the pale hose to a 4 to 3 victory over Washington. Thomas drove in three runs and pitched a neat game in the bargain.

Cleveland's winning streak was struck down in the bloom of youth when the Indians lost to the Red Sox, 6 to 5. Hal Wiltse was the winning twirler. He is the only pitcher who can win for the Sox and he is doing that little thing with great regularity.

In the only game played in the National League, the Cubs took third place away from the Phillies by trimming them, 6 to 3. Homers by Hack Wilson, Hartnett and Stephenson enabled Sheriff Blake to gain the decision over Hal Carlson in a walk.

ARGUE PROBABLE FIELD FOR DERBY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 11.—With the Preakness run and the majority of the horses which met in the contest on the "old hill top" at Pimlico either at the Downs or enroute for the fifty-third renewal of the Kentucky derby Saturday, gossip today turned toward the probable field for Saturday's classic, together with the respective merits of the thoroughbreds of the east and those of the west.

Since time immemorial, the two sections have waged a ceaseless battle for the premier honors of the most coveted prize on the American turf.

Rip Rap's arrival here Monday afternoon caused a stir in the derby colony, and Max Rirsch, trainer of the Sage stables candidate, let it be known his horse is as fit as human hands can make him. In company with Friiette, Rip Rap went a half in 52 3-5, breezing.

Candy Queen came out of the derby trial in such poor physical condition that she will not be a starter, her trainer, G. Walker, said. She is owned by H. Teller Archibald, and the Chicagoan likely will have no starter in the race.

Hydromel, Senator J. N. Camden's eligible, is a doubtful starter, according to his trainer, as a result of his poor showing Monday. The stock of Rolled Stocking, considered the leading western 3-year-old, continues to soar, and he is certain of strong support Saturday.

HOLE IN ONE IS OPENING DAY RECORD

Lem Wasbutzky Accomplishes Feat on Par 3 No. 6.

A hole in one on opening day is an achievement that sets a new record at the Country club course and, incidentally, a mark for other golfers to shoot at the remainder of the season.

The feat was accomplished yesterday afternoon during the playing of a sweepstakes under the direction of "Pro" Rader Jewett, by Lemuel Wasbutzky.

Wasbutzky, shooting with Hubert Chambers and William Gardner, teed off on his drive toward No. 6 green and finished the hole without further effort. It was an accurate drive of 130 yards.

The hole carries a par of three strokes.

CIRCUS DAY AT PATTERSON FIELD

Angelina, "Little Italian Girl," Appears With Film Success, "Mother," for Three Days.

The Ceramic theatre, on Thursday, Friday and Saurday, will offer its patrons, a comedy singing novelty, called "The Little Italian Girl," which will be presented in conjunction with the brilliant F. O. B. production, "Mother."

Fred Clifton will assist the featured artist, "Angelina," who comes here from New York successes at Broadway's most prominent theatres, including Keith's Palace and Riverside.

Angelina is four feet, six inches tall, but gifted with a remarkable voice. Besides being able to sing, she has the knack of using her voice for impersonations. One of her numbers describes a trip into a forest. This affords an opportunity to imitate a variety of birds.

The sacrifices that parents, especially mothers, will make for their children, is vividly shown in "Mother," the screen features.

Thre is nothing fictional to the theme—it is life's story enacted every day and every week and every month, and one leaves the theatre after viewing it with a more pronounced idea of the sacrifices, the hardships, endured by parents, and the burdens, though innocently, placed on fathers and mothers by children.

Belle Bennett, who won world wide fame by her marvelous portrayal in "Stella Dallas," is the typical American middle class mother in this picture, and it is universally agreed that it is her finest effort for the screen.

She portrays a Spartan mother—not the whining sort, but rather the sort of mother that forces a smile while her heart is on the point of breaking.

Crawford Kent, William Bakewell and Joyce Coad compose the family group, and Sam Allen, Mabel Julienne Scott and Charlotte Stevens are prominent in the supporting cast.

A postcard mailed in Packham, England, 16 years ago to a friend living a half-hour's walk away, has just been delivered, and because the postage rates have been raised the addressee had to pay the difference.

50 Paint experts showed us how varnish-stains differ

They all say mahogany on the can but Devoe says mahogany on the wood

WE NEVER realized the difference between varnish stains until we saw 50 paint experts test 8 different makes and pick Devoe Mirrolac as the varnish stain which reproduced most clearly their conception of the true hard wood tones. Use Mirrolac and be sure. It not only duplicates the desired hard wood tone, but at the same time adds a tough, beautiful coat of varnish.
